Lloyds Thinks No War The First Blow Is Best Out of the League. Why? The Head Man's Load

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. (International) copyright and all other rights reserved.

Lloyds, the great English insurance concern, at first refused to insure against war at any price. Now Lloyds will insure, otherwise to "bet," nine and a half to one against war within six months. Wall Street wanted that news and of course cheered up.

Chancellor Hitler said in Munich, on Saturday.

"I will take the full responsibility for what I have recently done."

I doubt whether anyone else would have the courage to take the full responsibility in his name alone.

Not many, probably, but it has been done. Cromwell took full responsibility for England, Napoleon for France, George Washington took and carried responsibility for this country. The heaviest load that a public man must carry is responsibility.

An intelligent young man who fought well in the big war speaks of "the 2-to-1" advantage which modern methods give the defense over the attack. To let the other man or nation come at you, if you are prepared, has been wise in the past.

It might be different in future wars, if the attacker with a couple of thousand airplanes, dropping explosive bombs and poison gas, should surprise the enemy. "Defense" would have no 2-to-1 advantage over that sort of attack. The advantage and victory will be with the country that strikes the first blow, if it hits hard enough to demoralize the defense.

The safety of this country, as with Russia, lies in its great size. If you destroyed New York, Washington, Boston, that would be bad, but you would not have conquered the United States, only one small slice. If you destroyed Paris, Bordeaux and Marseilles, France would be gone; if you destroyed London, Liverpool, Manchester, England would find it hard to recover.

Are you glad the United States is not a member of the League of Nations, with Geneva telling what this country must do about Europe's situation? The fact that we are not in the League is due primarily to two men, Senator Hiram Johnson of California, who fought the thing out in the Senate, and William Randolph Hearst, whose newspapers enlightened and created public opinion from one end of the country to the other.

New York reports a giant meteor, flashing brilliantly across the night sky, lighting six states, landing, apparently, with great force. Former credulity would have said "the fireball was sent to warn warlike nations in Europe, and tell us to keep out."

Modern incredulity thinks the meteor was "just natural," and tries vainly to find the place where it landed.

Scientists say the big meteor probably exploded and was melted into dust long before it hit the earth.

In Spain, burning of churches and other religious buildings continues, scores of Spaniards, including the son of the late Dictator Primo De Rivera, are locked up for trying to protect churches from destruction. Two more churches were burned in Madrid on Saturday, according to the Associated Press, and the "consecrated crucifix of the Christ of Faith, long an object of adoration, was destroyed."

Anti-religious hatred is said to be less intense in Mexico and in Russia than it was.

Government thought it wanted to dig a canal across Florida, avoiding loss of time and danger in the long windy trip around Key West.

Northern Florida, where the canal was to be located, wants it.

Southern Florida, which would be glad to have the canal, if it started, say at Miami, fights the canal, discovers that salt water from the canal will ruin Florida's fresh water supply. You wonder why the ocean and the gulf surrounding Florida have not done that, if a little canal could do it.

Meanwhile the government must pay for about 7,000,000 cubic yards of earth already removed, and the excavating continues, 78,000 cubic yards a day. If the canal is dropped after being approved, taxpayers will pay that bill, but "the eel is used to being skinned."

Pearl S. Buck, author of "The Good Earth," in private life Mrs. Richard Day Walsh, and her husband, have adopted two boys five weeks old.

That is better than adopting a furry Pekinese dog or a shivering long-haired, inbred Russian wolf hound. But if you kept a store with pet dogs at double the price of babies, you would sell more dogs.

Kidnap Fears Allayed By Arrest

Barbara Hutton Plot Bared in Court

NEW RAINS IMPERIL MAINE FLOOD AREAS

5-10 HEIRESS EXTORTION PLOT BARED

Manchester, Eng., March 16 (AP)—Alfred Molyneux, 31, of Lancashire, was jailed today on a charge of attempting to extort £200 ($1000) from Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow by pretending to reveal a plot to kidnap her newborn son.

Police said that Molyneux had admitted writing a letter during "moments of depression" offering to disclose the "plot." He was remanded in custody for a week.

The prisoner was trapped by police when he went to keep a rendezvous with a "messenger from the Countess." He told the police that no kidnap plot existed.

Molyneux was arrested last Saturday. The letter went into details as to how contact between Molyneux and an agent from the Coun-

U.S. Probes Arms Firms In Boston

Department of Justice agents have been in the New England area for more than a week conducting a quiet probe into the business of at least 21 manufacturers of war materials, the Boston Evening American learned exclusively today.

The agents were sent here from Washington at the request of the National Munitions Control Board after anonymous information was received.

According to the Evening American's informant, this information charged that several firms in this area have been violating the Neutrality Act, recently extended for a year by President Roosevelt.

GREATLY SPEEDED

Production of war materials has become greatly speeded up to a point that would indicate a preparedness for foreign countries the agents were told. No actual shipments have as yet been found.

Also included in the probe, it was learned, will be shipping contracts to belligerent nations.

Makers of arms, ammunition and war materials of all kinds will fall under the watchful eyes of the special agents, and it was said that the probe may extend throughout the country.

There are approximately 560 makers of war materials in the United States, 16 of which manufacture gas-mask alone.

MAY BE WIDENED

It was said that at least three firms in this district, two of which have been in business for 25 years, were mentioned in the unsigned letters received by the Munitions Board.

Going even beyond the companies which manufacture guns and ammunition, the probe may be widened to include those firms making cloth goods, shoes, airplanes and airplane supplies.

Loans or credits by bankers will also be looked over by the G-Men for possible discrepancies under the Neutrality Act.

When the President signed the new bill which extends the old temporary measure until May 1, 1937, he issued a strict warning to the nation's shippers that they would carry on all transactions with belligerents "at their own risk" in the future.

WOULD BE EXEMPT

Latin-American countries would be exempt from the restrictions of the act, provided they were warring with non-American nations.

The President, under the Munitions Act, could prohibit commercial trades with any foreign nation if it was found that the treaty was in conflict with the operation of the act.

If violations are found by the G-men, prosecution would be handled by the National Munitions Control Board.

FRENCH RUSH TROOPS TO BORDER

Paris, March 16 (AP)—French troop reinforcements started today for the eastern frontier, facing the Rhineland newly occupied by Germany in violation of the Locarno pact.

The war ministry announced, however, that the 2000 reservists who entrained for the border this morning comprised a regular contingent, recalled for 28 days of training.

Small groups of communications forces and other specialists have been moving intermittently for several days.

A group of members of the Chamber of Deputies' army committee returned from the frontier with a report that the army manned its forts quickly after the German occupation, March 7, and executed all details of a plan long prepared.

Another army committee delegation will go to the northern border soon to investigate conditions near Belgium and Luxembourg.

3 Bannister Aumissions Barred

Bathurst, N. B., March 16 — With the wilderness waif baby doll case still on trial at Dorchester, 125 miles southeast, a new murder case involving a baby was given today to Royal Canadian Mounted Police to solve.

On the ice of the Nepisiguit River, the body of an unidentified baby boy was found.

According to the coroner, the baby had been strangled.

By WIN BROOKS
Boston Evening American Staff Writer

Dorchester, N. B., March 16—Three written statements, allegedly made by Mrs. May Bannister, were excluded from evidence today at her trial on a charge of kidnaping Betty Lake.

Chief Justice J. H. Barry, presiding at trials of the wilderness waif-baby doll case, ruled that the statements were illegal documents, and so inadmissible.

Crown counsel had devoted an entire day of the trial, with the jury excluded, to evidence hearing upon the condition under which the statements were obtained, in an effort to prove them admissable. Their exclusion was expected to shorten the trial.

The statements were purportedly made by Mrs. Bannister on January 11, 12 and 13.

At that time, Mrs. Bannister's sons, Arthur, now doomed to hang, and Daniel, waiting trial, had already been placed under arrest for the massacre of the Lake family at their Pacific Junction cabin, and the baby alleged to be Betty Lake, had been found in the Bannister home.

BIG ICE JAM MENACES BANGOR

Rain and thawing temperatures — twin factors that started one of the worst floods in New England history — threatened the section anew today.

Only if ice fields in the rivers hold together until nightfall, when colder weather is predicted, will the peak of the peril be passed definitely.

Maine cities on two of the state's biggest rivers, the Penobscot and the Kennebec, anxiously awaited the breakup of fields of ice, miles long, aggregating millions of tons. To this menace was added the sudden swelling of the Saco river, worrying Biddeford and Saco.

Massachusetts, hoping for a breathing spell to repair $1,000,000 worth of highway damage, met with new floods in the eastern section.

The Concord river, rising more than a foot since last night, spilled out over several thousands of acres in Billerica and southern Lowell today and flooded the main Boston-Lowell highway for more than 1000 feet.

Part of the Talbot mills in North Billerica was thrown out of commission. The Waterhead Mill at Lowell joined the score of others closed down and 350 employes were sent to their homes to join other jobless thousands.

Bangor, hard hit in the four days of flood that took 13 lives and caused millions of dollars' damage to the New England States, is in the

MURDER VICTIM FOUND IN SURF

Madison, Ct., March 16—Murder on the high seas was seen by police here today as efforts were made to identify the body of a man found on East River beach.

The body had been bound securely with a length of electric light cord similar to that used on boats. Some of the knots were tied sailor-fashion.

The only clues to identity of the victim were parts of a coat and vest and two stringless shoes. The body had been in the water for three or four months, authorities said.

Both hands were missing, as were parts of the face. This was caused, the police declared, by action of the tides.

The body was that of a man between 40 and 50 years old, about five feet eight inches tall.

Washington, March 16 (AP)—President Roosevelt greeted a group of University of Hawaii student debaters today and told them they said on leaving the White House, he hoped to visit the islands again next year.

STOCKS MIXED

New York, March 16 (AP)—Buying of low-priced utilities and a few Air Transport Company issues helped to stiffen the stock market today after the list had been dented in early dealings by profit-taking.

Transcontinental & Western got up $2, near the start of the fourth hour, and others up fractions to a point or more included United Air Lines, National Power & Light, American Light & Power, American Foreign Power, Borden, Baldwin Locomotive and Chrysler.

Clement F. Molway, 25, of Burbank street, Brighton, and Oliver T. Emery, 24, of Vermont avenue, Somerville, pleaded not guilty today to charges of larceny of an auto and using it without authority when they were arraigned in East Cambridge district court.

Molway, who was tried for a Lynn murder confessed to later by the Millens, was arrested with Emery in Brighton in a machine police allege was stolen from a Harvard student.

RESPONSIBILITY

"There is nothing of which a free people are so apt to be jealous as of the existence of political functions and political checks in those who are not appointed by, and made directly responsible to themselves."

—JOSEPH STORY, "Commentaries on U. S. Constitution," January, 1833.

DEADLINE INCOME TAX RUSH IS ON

An exceedingly heavy mail kept clerks busy today in the income tax division at the Federal building. Zero hour was 4:30 p. m.

It is figured that the amount in taxes this year will reach $15,000,000 which is 25 per cent more than last year.

Collector Welch said returns by mail will get by the deadline if they are postmarked before midnight. The penalty for failure to file on time is 25 per cent of the tax. Late filers also lose the privilege of paying up in installments.

He set aside the luncheon hour for making out the return of his 1935 income, which must be filed before midnight.

As usual, Mr. Roosevelt compiled his own return without expert assistance.

The President receives a salary of $75,000 upon which he pays an income tax, as do all officials of the government.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS: FRANCE IMPERILS PEACE

HITLER'S TERMS SHOULD BE ACCEPTED, HE DECLARES

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

Prime Minister of Great Britain During the World War

(World copyright, including South America, 1936, by Universal Service and American Newspapers, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

London, March 16—The war is off.

Sanctions are by no means certain.

Neither is real peace.

The French have ascertained that even her most ardent friends in Europe shrink from war. They are now for the imposition of economic sanctions. They will not succeed in obtaining the co-operation of all the powers whose help is essential to a blockade.

David Lloyd George

Hitler's conditions from the dignity of the powers and if frankly accepted would lead to European pacification.

The signatories to the Locarno treaty themselves so far have only agreed to administer a scolding to Germany, but they have no idea how to begin tackling the task.

I have just heard that Germany has accepted, with two conditions, the invitation to send a representative to the League Council in London today.

Hitler's two conditions seem to me to be fundamentally reasonable. do not, in my opinion, derrogate

Flandin has angrily rejected both conditions, and responsibility for what ensues—and that, I fear, will be grave—must rest with him and with the government which he represents.

I cannot help feeling that general sentiment, certainly in this country, will be one of deep regret not unmixed with a feeling of deep annoyance, that the peace of the world should be thus recklessly jeopardized.

There is a most complete confusion of counsel everywhere. In this country there is a motley crowd of imperialist diehards and impenitent pacifists clamoring for penalties against Germany.

Revenge Sought

Nazism has swooned to rouse against itself a number of antagonisms which are incongruous and which are mutually antagonistic. Extremists from every quarter and from opposite corners are all howling for vengeance.

The Nazi revolution shattered Socialism, Communism, Liberalism—all alike have been its victims.

In another camp, which is indifferent to the Nazi trampling on liberty, there are many who still nurture the war habit of regarding Germany as an enemy.

At these special critics believe in big armaments, Germany is their most convenient bogey. Hence this sputtering of gun play from different points of the compass directed at a Germany at bay.

Winston Churchill, leading orator of the diehard Tories, is just as anxious to take this opportunity to break the power of Nazism as the most fanatical Communist.

Sanctions Urged

Last night he advocated abandonment—his word was "suspension"—of the League of Nations sanctions against Italy in order to concentrate on Germany.

He is ready to embrace his old horror of Soviet Russia and grasp what was once stigmatized as "the hairy hand of that baboon" in his eagerness to destroy permanently German power.

In spite of these noisy clamors of persons only agreed in their hatred of Germany, the British people as a whole remain unmoved. Tendencious pargarapha published and broadcasts on the radio about the numbers of German troops in the Rhineland and the mixture of prejudiced tittle-tattle and innuendo which is inspired by the Germanophile clique in the foreign office have not quickened the British pulse one beat.

The vast majority of men and women of all political parties are convinced that the fault is not all on one side. They are not pro-German.

France Blamed

Germany has undoubtedly repudiated the treaty into which she entered and her conduct is reprehensible and is generally to be reprobated. But everyone knows that France has for years treated with subtle contempt her obligations under the same treaty and that in spirit she had also broken the Treaty of Locarno by her gigantic fortifications on the frontier and her military pact with Germany's bitterest foe—Communist Russia.

The latter pact was directed against Germany. It had no other point.

The contrast between the French promptitude in demanding action over Hitler's offense and the dilatory tactics employed over the Abyssinian business is impairing the moral force of France's appeal. That is why the great mass of people are not moved by her present display of righteous indignation at the occupation of German territory by German troops in defiance of treaties which France had disregarded when it suited her to do so.

A plebiscite taken now in Britain would not secure a decisive vote for war and not a 10 per cent vote for the employment of sanctions.

French statesmen are beginning to realize how things stand here so far as they are concerned. If there they had blamed individual for the reluctance shown to attack Germany—sometimes Eden sometimes Baldwin and occasionally others. They understand now that that feeling is wider and deeper than they ever apprehended. They are, therefore, trying once more to engage our sympathies for little Belgium.

That was all very well when Belgium was actually invaded. But the invasion of Cologne by a few battalions does not evoke the same indignation in British hearts as the burning of Louvain.

The tone of the Sunday papers was hostile to strong action being taken against Germany.

VATICAN BACKS PACT SANCTITY

Vatican City, March 16 (AP)—The Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano, today, appealed to the nations to regard the sanctity of treaties.

Quoting an old Latin saying that national safety is the supreme law, the newspaper said that, in international affairs, a treaty guaranteed by invulnerable reciprocal faith brings public safety for all nations and thus becomes a common supreme law.

"There does not exist any other principle or other force," said the newspaper, "which can assure peace, inspire and regulate customs, give stability to international life, and constitute a safeguard of civilization."

War Writer, Wife Struck by Bombs

Exploding aerial bombs, dropped by Italian war planes on a Red Cross station in Ethiopia, wounded Linton Wells, noted newspaperman, and his wife several times.

The war correspondent made this revelation today as he and his wife stopped at Boston aboard the American Export liner Exochorda, en route to New York.

"My wife was struck three times and I was hit five times during an air raid but, fortunately, the wounds were trivial," Wells said.

"The Italian victories in Ethiopia are greatly exaggerated, and a report that 40,000 of Selassie's troops had been captured in a raid is impossible. A victory celebration was held in Naples when the supposed capture report was received.

"Prices are rising rapidly in Italy, however, and gasoline costs 13 liras, or about $1.50 a gallon, with only one-fifth of a gallon allowed per person per day."

In the hold of the ship was an eight-months'-old leopard, named "Snooks," which is Mrs. Wells' pet until the animal grows up. Then it will go to a zoo.

Disembarkin here were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Balch, of Westwood and Boston, Balch is a prominent Boston real estate operator. They spent the winter in Italy.

Also returning from a visit overseas was Miss Theodora Berry, of Ipswich, of the Woman's Educational Union.

A titled touch was added to the ship's passengers by the presence of Baroness DeGasser, of Finland, on her first visit to this country.

Ice Floes Wreck Storehouse—Carried Miles by Flood

The pressure of grinding ice borne by roaring flood waters of the Kennebec river reduced this storehouse in Richmond, Me., almost to pulp. The huge cakes of ice may be seen floating under one corner of the building, already demolished by the impact of the floes. When this picture was taken, the flood had carried the large building miles downstream from its foundation. A few seconds later the waters again started building on its downstream voyage.

5 Italian War Fliers Killed

Rome, March 16 (AP)—General Pietro Badoglio advised his government today in a communique from the northern Ethiopian front that five members of an Italian airplane crew had been killed when the machine fell inside his own lines.

Addis Ababa, March 16 (INS)—Two Ethiopian armies totaling 100,000 men, those of Ras Kassa and Ras Seyou are still intact and occupy the western Tembien region, a government statement, denying Italian claims of immense victories, declared today.

French Rush More Troops As New War Crisis Grows

for equality, but flatly rejected his "condition" that the council must discuss his peace proposals.

Hitler had offered to send a representative to the council's deliberations on Germany's demilitarization of the Rhineland only on a basis of full equality in the conference and with the understanding that his recent offer of new peace pacts would be considered.

Six nations headed by France opposed Hitler's insistence on bringing his peace proposals up simultaneously with the discussion of the Rhineland reoccupation.

CONCILIATION REFUSAL

The conversations with France were Turkey, Spain, Russia, Poland and Rumania.

The council then voted unanimously to accept Hitler's first condition and to reject the second.

The vote was interpreted as tantamount to a qualified refusal of Hitler's conditions.

The council was agreed that Germany was entitled to sit in the council on an equal footing with the other Locarno powers—that is, without the right to vote.

The council ruled, however, that Hitler's proposals were a matter, not for the council, but for the signatories of the Locarno pact.

It was understood that the council decided to draft still another invitation to Germany to attend the League of Nations.

VICTORY FOR FRANCE

It was stated that, owing to their status as interested parties in he Locarno pact, France and Belgium, as well as Germany, will not be entitled to vote in the League Council meeting.

"This decision disposes of the difficulty," it was stated, "if Germany attended the council on an equal footing with other members of the league, she could block an otherwise unanimous decision by voting against it herself.

The French delegates said they regarded the verdict of the secret session as a decisive victory for France.

A French spokesman predicted that the league now would condemn Germany, since Great Britain and Italy "have given their assurances that for them the Locarno pact still exists."

He added that the French then could go home with what would amount to a triple alliance of Great Britain, Italy and France.

"Other powers," said the French spokesman, "may then discuss Hitler's proposals, but France never will. We are not sure that Germany will not attack us some day and, in view of recent events, we shall not talk with her until we get the guarantees we require of her good faith."

League officials, immediately after the secret session, began drafting a message advising the German government of the decision which was made subject to ratification in public sessions.

It was said that the wording of the message would not slam the door completely shut in Germany's face although it would not contain any new invitation to Germany to attend the council sessions.

Earlier in the day, members of the council sought to clarify Hitler's reply to the invitation to send a representative to he council. Clarification, it was said, centered in just what was meant by the word "aisbald."

Council delegates, including those of the Little Entente (Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania) and Soviet Russia, held a series of private discussions, and were understood to be ready to back the French stand fully.

Olive Branch, Miss., March 16 (AP)—Striking high school students protesting dismissal of six teachers formed picket lines today at the high school building and locked its doors.

Nazis Plan First Strategy--Retreat

Copyright, 1936, by International News Service

Berlin, March 16—Regarding the situation as "still very grave," the German military staff has completed its plan of strategy in case of a sudden attack in the Rhineland, it was learned today from sources close to the high command.

German garrisons in the Rhine area will fall back out of range of the powerful guns in the French fortifications, because the Reich lacks a similar "iron front" such as the Hindenburg line of 1918, a military authority said.

In the opinion of the general staff, according to this informant, it would be poor strategy to weaken the German defense links by giving the French forts an opportunity to hammer at the German army in the Rhineland. Therefore, it is planned to withdraw the garrisons sufficiently far to lure the French out of range of the fortresses at Metz, Strasburg, Mulhouse, and other points near the frontier.

Hitler's One Word May Mean War

Copyright, 1936, the Associated Press

London, March 16—The fate of negotiations concerning the critical relations of Germany with the rest of Europe may hang on the translation of a German word.

It developed today that the League of Nations Council may seek from Reichsfuehrer Hitler a clarification of his reply to an invitation to attend a council session.

The clarification, it was said, would be to clear up just what was meant by the word "alsbald" contained in the telegram Joseph A. C. Avenol, League secretary general, received from Hitler last night.

The German embassy here, while the British cabinet was considering the situation, informed the foreign office the correct translation of the word is "in due course" instead of "forthwith," as the council secretariat officially translated it.

The new translation put a modified interpretation on Hitler's condition of sending a representative to the council's session.

Mongolia Accepts Commission Probe

Moscow, March 16 (AP)—A conference for amicable solution of the vexing border disputes between the Japanese-sponsored State of Manchoukuo and Outer Mongolia was described today in information received from Ulan Bator, capital of the latter country.

Manchoukuo has accepted a Mongolian proposal for appointment of a mixed investigating commission, said today's dispatches. Coupled with this was an item in the government newspaper Izvestia, however, reciting that Japanese residents were leaving North Manchouxue in anticipation of armed conflict.

SIX MAINE DAMS IN PATH OF 20-MILE ICE JAM

most precarious position in Maine.

It is raining there. The temperature is in the middle forties, and a 20-mile ice jam is piled up between West Enfield and Oldtown, a few miles up the Penobscot from the city.

Six huge dams, each a thousand or so feet wide, must sustain a terrific battering should the ice-field—estimated at 6,000,000 tons—break loose.

Army engineers fear that the Saco river rise may cause in Southern Maine a duplication of conditions to the north and northeast. They expect to dynamite below Saco Falls to break the ice jam there.

Maine, according to Governor Louis J. Brann, has already suffered $10,000,000 in flood damage.

In Massachusetts generally, flood waters were receding, but the continual inundation from rivers and brooks has caused meadows and lowlands to reach saturation.

Because the waters from the Charles and Neponset rivers are not draining from the meadows in and around Dedham today, water is rising again in streets and cellars.

High street, Dedham, one of the two main arteries into the town, was under a foot and a half of water and the public works department had to erect temporary wooden bridges to accommodate foot traffic into Dedham square.

TWO FEET OF WATER

Similar conditions prevail on Eastern avenue, near the Veterans of Foreign Wars headquarters, where there is about two feet of water on the highway.

On Needham street, at the Needham-Dedham line, 600 yards of the street is flooded with water from two to four feet deep. Cellars are under four feet of water in the Readville Manor section, near Hyde Park.

In the Merrimack valley flood waters were receding steadily, but Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill are counting their losses in amounts that may exceed $500,000.

7000 JOBLESS

Lowell alone has 7000 out of work today with 20 factories and mills shut down. Firemen are still pumping flood water out of the million-dollar municipal auditorium.

The 100 or more families who had to abandon homes in the Rosemont section of the city were returning to their homes, but health officials warned against the danger of pneumonia.

The Shawsheen mills at Andover are closed. So are the E. Frank Lewis mill in Lawrence, the Farwell Bleachery, the Merrimack Company plant and part of the Pacific mills.

However, officials of the Essex Company reported the Merrimack River had dropped a foot and a half overnight at Lawrence.

Most of the mills along the river bank, including the Wood and Ayer mills of the American Woolen Company, which reported waterfilled basements during the height of the flood and suspended operations, expect to reopen tomorrow. All will reopen by the latter part of the week.

SHOE HANDS IDLE

Fifteen hundred shoe workers are jobless because Haverhill factories have been closed. Damage in that city is estimated at $100,000 loss to private and industrial properties, $15,000 to highways.

New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut and Rhode Island hoped that they had seen the worst of the flood, but rain in the northern regions, combined with the above-freezing mercury, made officials of those four states as uneasy as those in Maine and Massachusetts.

Wyman dam engineers at Bingham, Me., in the Kennebec watershed, said the effect of the rain would be felt there within 12 hours. Kennebec waters poured through one gate of the dam at slightly more than 8000 cubic feet a second.

Three other gates were held closed to prevent inundation of downstream towns.

Lumbermen on the upper Kennebec, Dead river and Lake Moxie faced the laborious work of collecting their logs, scattered over the lowlands and carried down river when log landings were washed out.

PARTIALLY INUNDATED

Another danger point was along the Sebasticook river as Clinton, Winslow, Benton Falls and Pittsfield were partially inundated.

At Moscow, an entire hill over which ran a private railroad was carried away by a wall of water and ice set loose from the Kennebec. Thousands in the flooded Kennebec and Androscoggin valleys found themselves with a scarcity of food, fuel and drinking water.

$5,000,000 LOSS

Reconstruction occupied railroads, utilities companies, municipal, State and federal authorities today.

Estimates of total damage are practically impossible, but it is certain that in Massachusetts alone losses counted by torn-up highways, washed-out railroad lines, broken bridges and dams, other private and industrial damage, will reach from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Northampton, virtually in a state of siege by the roaring Connecticut river for three days, was relieved by the river cutting itself a new channel below Hockanum.

Holyoke, on the river below, was relieved as well, since the water roared by gradually and the ice was broken up before it reached the Holyoke dams.

Train service, disrupted general-

New England Thaw Toll

Rain was forecast generally for the New England states tonight, but colder weather is offing presented a possible check to renewed flood menace. Conditions by states:

MASSACHUSETTS—Concord River rising steadily. Boston-Lowell road blocked. Dedham flooded by water backing up from Charles and Neponset river meadows. Mills in Lowell, Lawrence, Haverhill closed; some reopen tomorrow. State damage estimated at $3,000,000 to $5,000,000.

MAINE—Bangor in danger as 20-mile stretch of Penobscot river ice, estimated at six million tons, menaces six dams. Hundreds homeless in Penobscot, Sebasticook and Kennebec valleys. Saco river rise threatens Biddeford and Saco. Power, food and municipal water shortage.

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Rivers receding, conditions generally improving. Railroad lines open, except between Plymouth and Lincoln. Roads open, but some detours. Rain new danger.

VERMONT—Rivers down, roads damaged, but generally passable. Rutland-Bellows Falls railroad line open first time since Thursday. White River Junction-Wells River branch still closed.

RHODE ISLAND—Mills in Blackstone valley open. Flood danger conceded past, but heavy private and industrial property damage.

CONNECTICUT—Connecticut river 12 inches below flood peak of 24 feet. More than 100 homes and garages in East Hartford still flooded and isolated by ice packs in roads.

ly for four days in northern New England, was getting back to normal.

TRAFFIC RESTORED

The Boston & Maine announced that it has succeeded in restoring its traffic except on two short lines.

One is the road between White River Junction and Wells River, Vt.; the other is the Pemigewasset Valley branch between Plymouth and Lincoln, N. H.

In Massachusetts, however, between Boston and Clinton, buses are still supplementing rail travel. There is a washout at South Sudbury, which two days of repairing has been unable to reconstruct, because of renewing flood waters which undermine the new roadbed.

Franconia, Crawford and Pinkham Notches in the White Mountains in New Hampshire are open for the first time since the disastrous landslides of last Thursday, and most of the roads throughout the state are open to travel. Detours are necessary in northern sections.

At Hartford, Ct., the Connecticut River was still over flood level, but was dropping rapidly from the 24-foot peak reached yesterday.

Those in the East Hartford "meadows" section were still isolated, but they suffer the same fate during the spring freshets every year. More than 100 homes and garages still have several feet of flood water in cellars and basements.

Woman Flood Victim Found; Children Gone

St. Tite Des Caps, Que., March 16—The body of Mrs. Henri Duclos, drowned when her home collapsed Friday before an onrushing flood, was found half a mile from the ruins of the little home.

No trace of her three little children could be discovered by search parties scouring the river banks.

Rivers and streams in this section of Quebec, to the north of the St. Lawrence river, were virtually back to normal today after a drop in temperature.

Amnesia Victim

Relatives were enroute to Melrose today to make positive identification of an amnesia victim believed to be Mark Irving Smith, 24, of Main street, Nashua, N. H.

'Loves of the Princes Mdivani'

LUCKLESS HOUSE REARS 3 SONS

Death Claims Two

This is the first article in a series tracing the course of The Luckless House of Mdivani, particularly of the three colorful princelings of that noted Georgian family, elevated to the Russian peerage in 1752. Two are now dead, victims of tragic mishaps. The sons of Luckless House have been reduced to one.

By PAUL WHELTON

Official life in Russia at the turn of the century was lived lavishly, colorfully, brilliantly.

Nicholas was in power, Communism had scarcely reared its head, the Nihilists were the only subversives threatening the aristocrats—and there were the grim, frozen sweeps of Siberia for the anti-Czarist agitators.

For those favored by the court of Nicholas there were wealth and station and tremendous influence—and one of those so favored was General Zakhari Mdivani, who later was to become aide-de-camp to the Czar during the World War, but who, at the century's turn, was a junior officer in the Russian army.

Thus there was rejoicing when, into the house of Zakhari Mdivani, came a second son, to bear the name Serge Mdivani and to inherit as his birthright the title of princeling.

It was the year 1902, and Serge, 34 years afterward, was to meet a violent death on a field far removed from the Georgian town of Kutoum in the Russian province of Tiflis.

Before him, his younger brother, not yet arrived in the House of Mdivani in 1902, was to be killed in an automobile accident in Spain.

And long before either of these two tragedies, even before the three Mdivani brothers had heard of Hollywood in America and had thought of marrying, the family fortune was to be seized and the luck of the House of Mdivani was to start its fickle decline.

Three sons and two daughters came in all to General Mdivani and his regal wife—David, Serge and Alexis, the sons in the order of their birth.

Born in Russia

The daughters are Mrs. Charles Ulrich, wife of a famed international lawyer and Mme. Jose Maria Sert, wife of a Spanish mural painter.

The male side of the family was noted for reckless daring.

Although the matter has been disputed now and again it is fairly well established that the family was elevated to the so-called peerage in 1752 for heroic service in behalf of the Czar in the small principality of Georgia.

Georgia in 1802 became a Russian Province.

During the war General Mdivani was a close associate and confidant of the Czar serving as his personal aide from the start until the Bolshevik revolution cost Nicholas his throne and his life.

The boys' father later served as secretary of war in the Georgian National government. Then he removed his family to Paris.

Princess Serge and David arrived in the United States just 16 years ago, mere youths whose family fortunes had been practically obliterated by the confiscations of the Bolsheviki.

Both arrived here under the financial and personal patronage of Marshall Z. Crane, millionaire Massachusetts paper manufacturer, who had become acquainted with their father in Paris.

The boys were determined to be "on their own." At the same time they were determined to sample the Bay State's famed educational opportunities.

Studied at Andover

Both enrolled at historic Phillips Academy, Andover, Massachusetts after spending several months in the Crane home at Dalton, Massachusetts.

At Andover the two young Princes washed dishes, waited on table and the thousand and one other tasks required of those who desire to slash their tuition, board and room bills.

In 1927 David and Serge descended on Hollywood after making a comfortable fortune in oil and almost immediately contracted brilliant marriages with prominent women.

David married blonde and vivacious Miss Mowry, Serge became the husband of Pola Negri. The union of David and Mae soon ended in divorce.

Pola and Serge led a stormy existence which, after frequent quarrels and reconciliations ended finally in a Paris divorce court in 1931 with the actress obtaining her freedom. Two weeks after the divorce Serge married Mary McCormic, the singer.

This ended in 1933 with Miss McCormic obtaining a divorce. Soon after Serge announced that he was through for a "long, long while."

The promise lasted until February 8 of this year when Serge married the 25-year-old divorced wife of his younger brother Alexis.

Alexis arrived in America in 1929 to follow in the footsteps of his illustrious brothers. He was entertained at the Newport home of the Van Alens and in June of that year his engagement to Louise was announced.

Later in the summer the young couple were married at the Newport home of the bride's aristocratic parents. They immediately embarked for a honeymoon in Europe.

Difficulties developed in a few months culminating in a Holland divorce obtained by Louise, Alexis sailed for America.

On his arrival in New York he was received by the Franklyn Huttons fabulously wealthy parents of Barbara Hutton, the 5 and 10 heiress.

Followed a whirl-wind courtship with Alexis, following typical Mdivani tactics, chasing his bride-to-be half way around the world before she finally consented to be his wife. The happy day was named in romantic Bangkok, Siam.

The couple were finally married in Paris in June of 1933. After little more than a year of married life they separated. In April of 1935 Barbara obtained a Reno divorce.

Shortly afterwards she married the Swedish Count Haugwitz-Reventlow. They are now living in London where Barbara became a mother a few weeks ago.

Ex-Wives Sad For Mdivani

Buffalo, N. Y., March 16 (INS)—"It's terrible! It just doesn't seem possible!"

Thus did Mary McCormic, opera star and former wife of Prince Serge Mdivani, respond to the news of his death on a Florida polo field yesterday.

The singer was scheduled to give a concert here last night but cancelled it when she learned of Mdivani's death.

Berlin, March 16 (AP)—Pola Negri, first wife of Prince Serge Mdivani, expressed sorrow today at his death in a polo accident in Florida.

"What a dreadful thing to happen after Alexis' death!" she exclaimed. "We remained great friends even after he married again. I am deeply sorry."

PONY KILLS MDIVANI

Kicks After Polo Fall Fatal

Palm Beach, Fla., March 16—Princess Louise Van Alen Mdivani, New England bride of Prince Serge Mdivani, was in collapse here today in the palatial Van Alen villa, where the broken body of her husband lay cold in death.

Most glamorous of the three romantic Mdivani brothers, Prince Serge came to his death beneath the flashing hoofs of a polo pony in a championship game at Delray beach.

With him as he died was his young wife who pillowed his head in her arms as she knelt in the mire of the rainswept polo field.

She fainted and was removed to the family home here where attending doctors today said she was in serious condition from nervous shock and hysteria.

Prince Serge will be buried in Newport, R. I., on Thursday or Friday, according to information available today.

So ends the career of the second of the "Three Musketeers" of romance.

Eldest En Route

A career which carried him from the cloistered halls of Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass. to international fame, to the arms of Pola Negri, the actress, to Mary McCormic, the opera diva, to the divorced wife of his brother Alexis and finally to death in the game he loved best.

His youngest brother, Prince Alexis, first husband of Serge's bride, was killed last August in an auto accident in Spain shortly after he had been divorced by Barbara Hutton, now wife of Count Haugwitz-Reventlow.

Prince David, eldest of the family, was en route to Europe today aboard the Ile de France. News of his brother's death was flashed to him by radio.

It is understood that he will dash back to the United States as soon as his ship reaches Havre.

Prince Serge was playing Number One position on his own team, "The Georgians" as they battled "The Texans" for the Southeastern polo championship.

Unduly a reckless player Serge outdid himself as time was running out and his team was on the short end of a four to two score.

Racing goalwards was Cecil Smith, outstanding American polo-ist and star of the opposition. Mdivani raced his pony to intercept Smith.

There was a sickening crash and Mdivani was unseated and his horse thrown heavily to the ground.

Hoofs Crush Skull

It was declared that no autopsy would be held since the death was witnessed by qualified physicians.

Yesterday's match was decisive of the championship and was hard fought from beginning to end.

On the Mdivani team were George Prison, C. R. Harrison and E. A. F. Hopping, famed polonists. Opposing were Cecil Smith, W. G. Reynolds, H. Anson and Michael Phipps, owner of the field.

The judges declared that Smith was not to blame. They said that as Smith swung his mallet at the ball, Mdivani's pony ran full into his path.

Sister in Collapse At Mdivani Death

Paris, March 16 (AP)—Princess Isabel, sister of Serge Mdivani who died yesterday in a Florida polo accident, suffered a nervous shock today upon receiving news of her brother's death.

She was still ill from a nervous collapse, suffered after the death last August of Alexis Mdivani in a Spanish automobile accident.

True to End

Orange, Ct., March 16 (INS)—Faithfulness of a dog to his dead master was proved again today.

A police dog, whining and lugging at his leash, led searchers to the broken body of Harry Skinner, 62, of Milford, victim of a hit and run motorist, and then mounted guard over the body.

It was necessary for police to summon Skinner's son, William, 20, from Milford to persuade the dog to leave. He refused to eat and was shot.

5-10 Heiress Bares Plot To Rob Her less should be made in Manchester. It ordered:

"Let your messenger be outside the long bar at the Gaumont Picture Theater, March 14, at 7 p. m. And let him have a red silk handkerchief in his left hand.

"He will be asked, 'Daily?' and must reply, 'No, weekly.'

"If you intend to heed this put an answer in the personal column of the Manchester Evening Chronicle, March 12."

Detective-Inspector Forster told the Police Court the Countess gave the letter to her lawyer, who informed police, who upon the request advertisement was inserted in the newspaper.

RECEIVES PACKAGE

On Saturday, the inspector said, a detective carrying a dummy package stood outside the theatre while other detectives watched. Molyneux was arrested when he appeared at the stated time and received the package from the detective.

Detective-Inspector Forster testified that a letter was received at the Haugwitz-Reventlow London home March 7 reading:

"Dear Countess:

"I have read of your having a charming little son. Now don't get pannicky.

"You should know that two men have left Manchester to kidnap this son, and you'd be surprised to hear what elaborate plans have been made for his confinement while they wait for the ransom they intend to demand from you.

"If you would learn of these plans send some one to meet me in Manchester at once and I will let you know what I know.

"Do not get the police or I shan't talk. Please be sure to bring £20n in treasury notes."

Russian Stays Here And Keeps $1200

Peter Belzofiski, 45, of Washington avenue, Chelsea, left going back to Russia after all. And he still has his $1200.

He was placed on probation today in Chelsea district court for assault and battery on Patrolman Stanley Grysbinski—but he admitted that he likes this country.

Belzofiski was arrested two weeks ago while he was being ejected from Chelsea city hall, where he was trying to obtain a passport to go back to Russia.

He battled Patrolman Grysbinski, and cut the officers face with a closed knife. Judge Frank D. Crowley sent the defendant to the Psychopathic Hospital for 10 days' observation which expired today. He was reported as normal mentally. Police said the $1200 was found in his clothing at the hospital.

Wife Sues Jailed Bandit for Divorce

Her married life shattered when her husband was arrested as a member of a holdup gang, Mrs. Alice E. Lelland of Stoughton filed suit for divorce today in Dedham Probate Court.

The husband, Edward A. Lelland, was sentenced to 10 years in Concord Reformatory last week after pleading guilty in Suffolk Court to robbery, possession of burglar's tools and conspiracy.

Lelland was arrested with four other men and a woman in a South End house, where an arsenal was found. Members of the gang admitted two prospective holdups and a plan to free a Dedham jail prisoner, police said.

Mrs. Lelland, in her suit, said she married in Stoughton in 1927. They have three children. She gave Lelland's sentence of more than five years in prison as grounds for divorce.

Cuban Chief Coming

Havana, March 16 (US)—President-elect Miguel Mariano Gomez, of Cuba, accompanied by his wife, three daughters and two secretaries, will sail for the United States today, according to friends here.

Rabbits, 'Hoppers, Frogs Will Jump

Washington, March 16 (AP)—It won't be long now until the world will know whether a bullfrog can jump farther than a grasshopper.

Fred Orsinger of the Bureau of Fisheries originally planned a frog jump, but protests were heard that as jumpers bullfrogs were not so hot.

Then Ky. St. Germain of Napoleville, La., wrote:

"If you want to see something jump you should see one of my black horse grasshoppers."

Next someone suggested that frogs and grasshoppers were his natural bums compared with Kansas jack rabbits.

"O. K.," said the equarium director, "the bars are down. Bring them all on."

Lawyer 23 Years, Now College Frosh

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 16 (AP)—Freshman Thomas Fletcher of the University of Chattanooga seemed to be in line for some kind of a prize today. He held three titles.

Lawyer.

Former school teacher.

Former member of the state legislature.

The university's only freshman with whiskers.

Freshman Fletcher is 56. He had been practicing law here for 23 years when he decided to go to college.

"I expect I'm much better in my profession as a result of this training," said Fletcher. If his plans work out he will receive his A. B. degree at 82.

G. W. Hill's Son Engaged to Wed

New York, March 16 (AP)—The engagement of Gretchen Upperci, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Inglis Moore Upperci of Rumson, N. J., to George Washington Hill, Jr., son of the president of the American Tobacco Company, was published today.

Miss Upperci was graduated from Westover school in 1930 and made her debut in New York society in 1931.

Foul Play Sifted In Salem Injury

Salem, March 16—Police suspect foul play in the case of Daniel Hogan, 40, of 120 Boston street, night watchman at the John Flynn & Sons Leather Co. on Boston street.

Hogan was found unconscious yesterday on the second floor, near the elevator shaft, by Matthew H. Comiskey of Boston street. While Comiskey was giving first aid, Hogan was moved and police found him in a room forty feet away, still unconscious.

Lumber Industry Enjoys Uptrend

Washington, March 16 (AP)—The National Lumber Manufacturers Association today reported the lumber industry experienced a business upturn during the week ended March 7.

New business was the heaviest since January and was three per cent greater than the average of the previous weeks of the year. Shipments were five per cent less than the preceding week but four per cent higher than the average of the previous nine weeks.

Indicted Sweeps Backer Kills Self

New York, March 16 (AP)—Jackson Harding, 35, a broker who was at liberty in $2000 bail in the Knights of Columbus sweepstakes fraud case, was found dead today in the gas-filled kitchen of his East Side apartment.

Police said Kearns, after taking precautions not to kill his wire-haired terrier or to cause an explosion, committed suicide.

They would not make public a note addressed to his wife, who is under indictment, with R. M. McGrady, his attorney, said it read, in effect:

"Angel, I love you. I hope the help in all you expect it to be."

Twelve persons including Kearns were arrested March 2 and charged with using the mails to defraud. Federal officers explained the Knights of Columbus acted in good faith in engaging the company.

Crisis Halts Italy, Austrian Parleys

Vienna, March 16 (INS)—Because of the Locarno deadlock in London, Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy today postponed for three days the important conference with Austria and Hungary scheduled to begin in Rome today.

'GREEN' POLO PONIES

Prince Warned Not to Ride

Hollywood, March 16 (US)—Prince Serge Mdivani was warned against riding "green" polo ponies.

Purchase of 14 fresh, but untrained horses, was probably the downfall of the young princeling, according to Robert O'Malley, confidential secretary to Serge for the past 15 years, O'Malley said:

"I warned him just 10 days ago against riding inexperienced ponies, but he chided me for being too cautious.

"He had just added the new purchases to his string of 34 animals, and he was extremely proud of their speed and endurance.

"But the boy was young, full of the spirit of life and wouldn't listen to me. He was a fine horseman—one of the best. Throwing caution to the wind probably cost him his life."

O'Malley, who has witnessed the rise and fall, and rise again, of the Mdivani fortunes, knew the three famous princes intimately.

O'Malley had preceded Prince Serge and his heiress bride to California. He said they intended to come here directly after the polo matches in Florida for a long stay, O'Malley continued:

"Serge had hoped to carry on where Alexis left off. He had organized a team of the best polo players in the country. Next year he hoped to storm England, France and India.

"Serge was just 31. He was full of the zest of youth."

TRICKY RADIO TESTS

Government Out to Trap You

Washington, March 16 (AP)—Over a nation-wide network tonight the federal government will pop this question at radio listeners:

"What is the Prince of Wales' first name?"

The answer is, of course, that since the death of King George V there is no Prince of Wales—and that's just a sample of how tricky the new radio program is.

The federal office of education, which is sponsoring "Answer Me This," plans to ask nine or 10 other questions in its weekly 10-minute programs, starting tonight. It will be held on Monday evenings from 6:35 to 6:45 (E.S.T.) over the National Broadcasting Blue Network.

Friday night, at the same time, on the NBC Red Network, the Office of Education will start "Have You Heard?" a series of questions on current events. One question will deal with the reason why women don't feel the cold so much as men.

It's because they have an insulating layer of fat that men don't have.

William D. Boutwell, editor-in-chief of the Office of Education, said three other radio programs will be started soon. The aim is to stimulate interest in current events, geography and science.

Incidental music will start the programs. The average person ought to register about 80 per cent correct answers.

The Office of Education was given a $75,000 work relief allotment for the program. Broadcasting companies donate the time.

GLAMOROUS EPISODES IN ROYAL LIVES

ELSA Tosses Movie ORCHIDS

MARION DAVIES 'MOST POPULAR'

New York, March 16 (INS)—Elsa Maxwell wafted a kiss and a handful of superlatives to Hollywood today—"sweet, unspoiled Hollywood."

Miss Maxwell, who, for, lo, these many moons, has conscientiously devoted herself to heightening the gayety of nations, tossed her first superlative to Marlene Dietrich.

"Miss Dietrich, without doubt," said society's pet and favorite party promoter, "is the only really glamorous person in Hollywood. There are many charming women, of course. But charm is the stock in trade of movie stars. They aren't glamorous. Miss Dietrich is."

Why? Well, like all glamor, Marlene's is "indefinable."

Miss Maxwell also unfolded what she swore was the "inside story" of why the Marlene walked off the Paramount lot leaving that studio with about $800,000 worth of uncompleted film story.

"They were shooting the picture without a script and without any idea how it would come out," Miss Maxwell explained. "They came to where Miss Dietrich was in a cabbage field. She was told she was to hear a shot. She heard it and registered fright, amazement. They said that was wrong.

"She asked what reaction she should register. They told her they weren't sure because they didn't know how the story would end. So she left."

Marion Davies, said Miss Maxwell, is the most popular person in Hollywood.

Marion's Greatness

"And that opinion is universal there," she added. "Miss Davies is a most human sort of person, she isn't temperamental, she's kind, courteous, democratic.

"She treats the cameramen, the call-boy, everyone, with the same politeness and pleasant manner she has for the director or any of the big figures. She's real and kind."

Grace Moore, Miss Maxwell believes, has the best voice.

Most beautiful, Miss Maxwell declared, is Dolores Del Rio. Greatest lady and best hostess is Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn.

Clark Gable is the gayest; Loretta Young was the most radiant personality, Carole Lombard the best sense of humor; Miriam Hopkins is the most intelligent; and John Barrymore the most fascinating but most brusque.

HEARST CHARGE SERVED UPON SEN. BLACK

Washington, March 16 (INS)—With the Senate lobby committee engaged in a public hearing, a United States deputy marshal walked in today and formally served upon the chairman, Senator Black (D.) of Alabama, papers advising him of the suit William Randolph Hearst filed against the investigators last week.

Black accepted service with a smile, but Senator Schwellenbach (D.) of Washington, interrupted questioning of witnesses to criticize Mr. Hearst.

HEARST CHARGES

Mr. Hearst's suit asked the District of Columbia Supreme Court to grant injunctions compelling the committee to return to him copies of telegrams which he sent and received last year.

He also asked an order compelling the senators to come to court and show cause why they should not be enjoined from further delving into telegraph company files for copies of messages.

The publisher charged in his bill of complaint, that the Black Committee was engaged in a "fishing expedition," and was proceeding in a wholly unconstitutional manner.

Only one member of the committee, Senator Minton (D.) of Indiana, remained without formal notice of the Hearst suit. Black advised the marshal he could return and serve Minton later in the day.

"I want to make a statement," Schwellenbach said, as cameras clicked and the business of serving Black was concluded.

"This committee," continued Schwellenbach, "is sitting as a committee of the United States Senate, duly appointed by the Senate, for the purpose of investigating lobbying activities in connection with federal legislation.

"There has just been served upon the chairman, while the committee was in session, a subpoena and a bill of complaint, in an action against the committee by William Randolph Hearst.

"The purpose is to prevent this committee from proceeding with its work, as directed by the Senate.

"If Mr. Hearst succeeds in this case, the next logical step that we may expect will be for some marshal to come into the Senate when it is in session, and serve a subpoena upon the vice-President."

HOST TO CONGRESSMEN

When the senator concluded, the hearing was resumed.

Smith said he represented the national conference of investigators, which he termed an "organization of organizations," including many Pacific Coast units. He freely admitted he "interested" himself in the Pettengill long-and-short haul bill last year, favoring its passage.

Smith said he had talked to as many as fifty members of Congress concerning the legislation in which he was interested.

"Did you ever have congressmen visit your home?" Schwellenbach asked.

"Why, yes," said the witness.

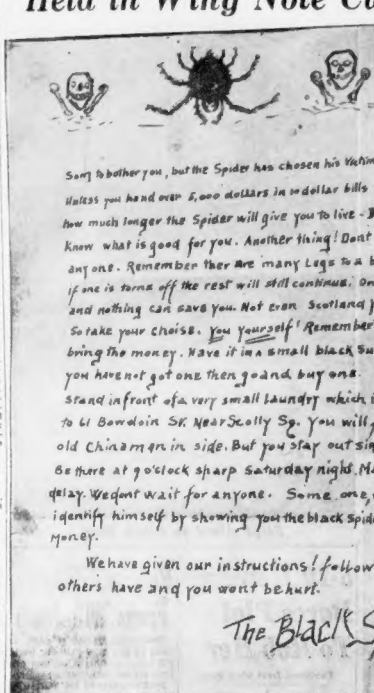
Smith testified he received money from various power companies last year for his organization.

He said he not only discussed the Pettengill bill but other legislation.

Witness said he did not have all of the telegrams which he sent in connection with legislation, but committee members revealed they had copies of them.

'Black Spider' Plot Suspect Held in Wing Note Case

Threat Sent Rich Widow



This letter, signed "The Black Spider Gang," was received by Mrs. Wing. Note the black spider illustration between two crude skull and bones drawings. Warning read in part: "Sorry to bother you, but the Spider has chosen his victim!"

Louis Rumph, 22-year-old German, who was arrested on a charge of attempted extortion against a wealthy Brookline widow, Mrs. Daniel G. Wing, was being held under $10,000 bail today

Charged with attempted extortion under threat of bodily harm, Louis Rumph, 22-year-old German, was held in $10,000 today in Brookline Court to await action by Norfolk county grand jury.

Mrs. Daniel G. Wing, wealthy Brookline widow of the banker, against whom the alleged "Black Spider" attempt to extort $5000 was made, was not in court, nor was there a representative for her.

The young defendant waived examination and District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing himself prosecuted the case, stating that as yet federal officials had taken no action in connection with Rumph's alleged use of the mails in the plot.

Rumph was arrested Saturday night in a trap set for the writer of a letter turned over to Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk by Mrs. Wing. The letter's contents were revealed today in court for the first time.

The letter said:

"Sorry to bother you, but The Spider has chosen you as his victim. Unless you hand over $5000 in dollar bills we don't guarantee how much longer The Spider will give you to live!

"Don't refuse if you know what is good for you. Don't notify police or anyone! Remember, there are many legs to a black spider. If one leg is torn off the rest will continue. One damsting and nothing can save you! Not even Scotland Yard can save you.

"Take your choice, you yourself. Remember that.

"You must bring the money in a small black suitcase. If you haven't got one, go and buy one.

"Stand in front of a very small laundry located next to—Bowdoin street, near Scollay square. There's an old Chinaman inside. Be there at 9 sharp Saturday night, March 14. Don't delay, because the Black Spider does not wait. Someone will identify themselves with a Black Spider.

"We have given instructions—follow them like all others have done and you won't be hurt. (signed).

"The Black Spider Gang."

BENEFIT CASH READY FOR STRIKERS

With one clause preventing complete accord between garment strikers and employers, Philip Kramer, vice-president of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, announced today that the union was prepared to begin paying strike benefits before the end of the week.

Agreements cannot be signed, according to Kramer, until the manufacturers belonging to the Massachusetts Dress Manufacturers Association accept the union demand that cutters be allowed to mark cloth for cutting. Some employers say they can save thousands of yards on large orders by marking the cloth themselves.

Unable to agree at a conference yesterday, the manufacturers met again today at 260 Tremont street, while strikers held a mass meeting at Paine Memorial Hall, Appleton street, South End.

Two strikers were fined and two given jail sentences in municipal court when they were arraigned on charges growing out of strike disturbances.

Edward Handoro, and his brother, Robert, of Chester avenue, Chelsea, appealed one month terms imposed on each for assault and battery on Morris Epstein, of Beacon street, Chelsea.

Frank Catapano, of East Boston, appealed a $10 fine imposed for throwing missiles, and William Dokair, of Capon street, Dorchester, likewise appealed a $10 fine for assault and battery on an unknown person.

Boston Wins Fight To Cut Ship Rate

The Boston Port Authority today won another victory when word was received by cable that the $1.25 differential rate recently put into effect by the West Coast of Italy North Atlantic Conference directed at this port had been cancelled.

The action resulted when Boston lines, including the American Export Coulich and the Pollio steamship companies notified the conference they refused to put the new rate into effect. If the rate were in effect here shippers would have to pay $1.25 more a ton on freight from Italy to Boston than to any other port on the Atlantic coast.

The Department of Commerce, Senator Walsh and Senator Coolidge of Massachusetts, White of Maine and Gibson of Vermont, Congressman John McCormack and other New England interests joined with the Boston Port Authority in the fight.

'Something for a Rainy Day'

WAS it written in the old copy books by mistake where it said:

"Save a little for a rainy day."

Is there something new fangled in the air that ought to lead us to erase the old maxims?

We just sort of wonder in a homely way, as we contemplate the suggestion that 33 1-3 per cent of undistributed corporate income be taken for federal taxes, whether the idea drummed into us since childhood about saving doesn't work nowadays.

"Undistributed corporate income" sounds heavy, like something that ought to be carried off, but so far as our limited understanding goes it means in plain language the money that American industries, our factories, plants, mills and mines have laid up for that proverbial "rainy day."

WE have just come through one of those periods, and the "rainy day" money has stimulated employment when it was needed, paid dividends, provided employment.

It seems quite as sound common sense for corporations as for individuals to lay up something for rent, to say nothing of wages to workers and dividends to stockholders in case next year or the next happens to be unprofitable.

That is merely prudent management. There is nothing unsocial about it that needs combing down or penalizing.

Who is going to say, in our vast and divergent industrial set up, what is a "reasonable" amount to lay away against the coming of lean years?

AMERICANS own American industries.

There are about 25,000,000 stockholders in American corporations, eliminating duplications, and of this number more than 96 per cent own less than 100 shares of stock.

In American Telephone and Telegraph, for example, the average stockholder owns around 25 shares, and received dividends throughout the entire depression, although the money was not earned, but had been accumulated during the flush period of business and laid away for the "rainy day" which surely came.

WE do not aim to set ourselves up as financial experts, economists, or claim to be in tune with the newest philosophical theories of taxation, but we just kind of wonder, in a good old fashioned way whether the lesson, "save something for a rainy day," doesn't apply any more.

And whether saving something out of what it spends isn't still a pretty good idea to let American business keep.

The last "rainy day" would have been lots worse if business hadn't saved up something for it.

There may be a "next depression." For years we've been talking about the "next war." Maybe, after all, it might be plain common sense not to dig too far into the business purse just now.

COUGHLIN SAYS LABOR TURNING TO SOCIALISM

Detroit, March 16 (US)—Either consciously or unconsciously, the laborers of America are moving to a change which, forsaking modern capitalism, will lead them to adopt some form of Socialism, some phase of Communism or some adaptation of Fascism unless a saner and more logical program is offered to them, the Reverend Charles E. Coughlin declared in his weekly broadcast.

Referring to his National Union for Social Justice, Father Coughlin said:

"The program of social justice offers a program in harmony with the Constitution of the United States."

"We believe in private ownership of property, government ownership of transportation, natural resources, public utilities and communications.

"However, private corporations or individuals shall not be forbidden to own and operate oil wells, mines, power plants, communication and transportation systems.

"The only interpretation under social justice is limited to this, that a government may own and operate such forms of wealth when necessity demands it either in competition or co-operation with private enterprises.

"Money must be coined, issued and regulated by the federal government.

"We believe in trade unions in non-mass production activities and vertical unions in the mass production factories. The workman has the right to strike but we believe the government should intervene when the contending parties cannot reach an agreement.

"To my mind modern Capitalism and Marxian Socialism are Siamese twins. The exponents of modern Capitalism and of extreme Socialism both agree private ownership is inimical to the welfare of the people. Capitalism steadily concentrates all wealth and control of credit in the hands of a few; extreme Socialism proposes to crystalize all wealth in the hands of the state."

Bruno-Jafsie Talk Sought by Hoffman

Copyright, 1936, International News Service

Trenton, N. J. March 16—Governor Harold G. Hoffman will ask Dr. John F. ("Jafsie") Condon to confront Bruno Hauptmann, a close aide of the governor's disclosed today.

"Jafsie" is due in New York from Panama tomorrow. The Jersey executive probably will meet "Jafsie" in New York this week.

"The Governor intends to ask Condon to talk to Hauptmann," he said. "Governor Hoffman never has even hinted at what he really wants to ask Condon—and nobody has guessed. If Condon can supply certain information the whole aspect of the case as it now stands will be changed."

Theater Official Injured by Auto

Injuries from which he may die were suffered today by Arthur Freeman, 33, assistant manager of Loew's Orpheum Theater, when he was struck by an auto at Huntington avenue and Ruggles street.

Freeman, who lives at the Hotel LaSalle, suffered a fractured skull, concussion of the brain and possible internal injuries. According to police, car was operated by Arnold Schneider of South Natick.

Gloucester Fines 18 in Gaming Raid

Gloucester, March 16—Twenty-one men, arrested yesterday in a police raid on a club quarters on Maplewood avenue, were fined a total of $84 today in district court on the charge of being present at an unlawful game on the Lord's Day. Police Sergeant Edmund T. Corrie said gambling was going on when police entered. Fifteen of the men were fined $5. Three were fined $3 and the rest were put on probation for six months.

Harvard Bulletin's Meanderings Told

Washington, March 16 (AP)—The Harvard Alumni Bulletin's recent question as to how a copy of the publication turned up in the White House kitchen had an answer today from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

She explained that the many magazines sent to the White House are either sent to the libraries at Hyde Park or at Warm Springs, Ga., or to members of the White House executive staff.

Having perused the alumni bulletin, Mrs. Roosevelt recalled, it was cast aside and later salvaged by someone else in the household. Mrs. Roosevelt said no doubt there were others in the house who had interest in Boston and she imagined they picked it up.

The Bulletin editorial said:

"Does the President find time to read the Bulletin before its banishment? Or—happy thought—is the White House chef himself a Harvard graduate?"

High Court Gets New Utility Appeal

Washington, March 16 (AP)—Another new deal case involving constitutionality of the Public Utility Holding Company Act was appealed today to the Supreme Court.

The court met in brief session, but handed down only two decisions of restricted significance. Thereupon the justices adjourned until March 30.

OFFICIALS MAP SLUM PLAN

Washington, March 16 (AP)—Federal experts on housing and finance were called by President Roosevelt today in another attempt to draft a slum-clearance and low-cost housing program.

Roosevelt is seeking a plan which will provide government aid to private industry, probably through guarantee of loans, to promote low-cost housing construction. In addition, there would be direct aid for slum-clearance.

Those invited to the White House include Peter Grimm, assistant to Secretary Morgenthau; Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board; Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; John Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; Stewart McDonald, director of the Housing Administration, and Herbert Gaston, another Morgenthau assistant.

Erin Sons to Dance

Providence, R. I., March 16—The second annual banquet and dance of the Friendly Sons of Erin will be held here tomorrow night at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Greene street. James McDonough is secretary of the committee.

Manvilles Divide Mansion—And Rest

New Rochelle, N. Y., March 16 (AP)—The Manvilles, Tommy and his No. 4 wife, Marcelle Edwards, made up again today and comparative calm settled down on their 28-room Premium Point mansion "Bon Repos." "A Pleasant Rest" to everybody but the Manvilles.

Yesterday's skirmish, as did the one last week and the one the week before that, ended in a draw with everyone more or less happy except the Mamaroneck police, New Rochelle Hospital and "Taps," Tommy's $400 police pup.

The Manville asbestos heir telephoned to Mamaroneck police.

"Put that woman out," the asbestos heir shouted to the policeman who went to the mansion.

For the next hectic five hours, between dodging highball glasses and saucers, the officer negotiated.

Tommy, not satisfied without action, called New Rochelle Hospital and an ambulance.

"Take that woman away," Tommy shouted.

The interne refused and science and the law deserted the house of pleasant rest. And so Tommy and Marcelle hugged and kissed and drew a line dividing the house into two 14-room camps. In one side slept Marcelle. In the other slept Tommy and "Taps."

"Taps," said Tommy, "is all upset."

ROCKETS SOAR HIGH

Carry Instrument, Not Humans

Washington, March 16 (AP)—Progress in developing rockets which may pierce the secrets of the skies was described today by the Smithsonian Institution.

In a new report of the work of Dr. Robert H. Goddard of Clark University in developing these rockets, the institution, which at one time financed his research, declared that "rocket ships" which would carry human beings are impossible at present, but that the carrying of scientific instruments is practical.

Goddard's rockets, which weigh between 35 and 85 pounds, have attained speeds of 700 miles an hour, or 200 miles greater than the highest air plane speed which engineers expect to achieve, and have risen about 7500 feet in short experimental flights in the desert near Roswell, N. M.

The motor of the machine, the Smithsonian report declared, is a combustion chamber in which liquid oxygen and gasoline mix with explosive force. The resulting power is exerted downward through nozzles to the tail.

To control these jets and keep the rocket on a straight path, Dr. Goddard developed a small gyroscope, a rapidly-spinning top which resists efforts to turn it. This controls the fins on the tail which direct the driving flames.

The Smithsonian Institution declared that at present the motor and means of stabilization are satisfactory and the next practical problem to solve is the reduction of weight of the rockets themselves.

SOLONS SPEED TAX, RELIEF MEASURES

Washington, March 16 (US)—Firmly fixing adjournment for May 15, a restless Congress today cocked its eye on political maneuvers "back home" and prepared to speed tax, relief and appropriation programs.

President Roosevelt is expected to send his relief message to Congress just before departure for his Florida fishing trip Thursday. It was reliably reported the President has allotted more than $2,000,000,000 from original plans for his relief program for the fiscal year 1937.

Administration spokesmen revealed the President will suggest an allotment of between $1,250,000,000 and $1,500,000,000, instead of the $2,000,000,000 planned earlier in the year.

Chairman Hill of the subcommittee, said the tax program would be reported to the full committee "in about ten days," when public hearings on the controversial measure will begin. Administration leaders said the tax program would not come to the House before April 20 when it begins its journey through Congress.

This week the House will receive the largest peacetime navy appropriation bill in history. Chairman Cary of the House subcommittee now considering the bill, said the measure provides funds to increase the enlisted personnel of the navy from 87,000 to 100,000, beginning next fiscal year.

Navy allotment for 1937 as planned by the subcommittee aggregates more than $540,000,000, which is about $87,000,000 more than granted last year.

The Senate today will bring up the War Department appropriation bill. The Senate appropriations committee has recommended a boost of more than $65,000,000 over the House allotment for national defense in the coming fiscal year. Senate leaders believed the War Department's supply bill would be rushed toward passage by tonight.

Galapagos Island Mystery Cleared

7 DIE IN NEW EDEN TRAGEDY

(Editor's Note—The mystery of the Galapagos Island tragedies has been carefully investigated by Captain William Borthen. He reveals his findings exclusively to International News Service.)

By GRIFFING BANCROFT, Jr.
(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service.)

Los Angeles, March 16 — Baroness Eloise Bosquet de Wagner, eccentric "Empress of the Galapagos," is dead—one of the victims of a double murder which shattered the famous Twentieth Century "Garden of Eden" and sent men fleeing in terror from the lonely Pacific archipelago.

Somewhere, hidden in the tropical mangrove jungles of equatorial Charles Island, lie the bodies of the picturesque Austrian baroness and her last sweetheart, Robert Philippson, Paris business man.

7 Lives Forfeit

That was the startling word brought to International News Service today by Captain William Borthen, skipper of the tuna clipper Santa Amaro, who, 18 months ago, discovered two other bodies on adjacent waterless Marchena Island and plunged the Galapagos cult into a mystery which has veiled it ever since.

It was paradoxical tragedy which struck among the idealists who sought respite from civilization on their island Eden. And since it first struck in June, 1931, two have died violent deaths, one was killed by poison, two perished of thirst in trying to escape and one fled in utter terror to Europe.

On the island, now avoided by natives and whites as a haunted spot, one family of four remains. They are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wittmer, German nudists, and their two children one of whom was born on the island.

Whether the "tragedy of Eden" came from within or without the colony remains a mystery—but that it was a man-devised tragedy is an established fact, in the opinion of Capt. Borthen, who has just braved the terrors of a tropical jungle and the superstitions of natives in several weeks of intensive investigation.

It was in June, 1934, the self-styled empress and Philippson vanished. Soon after Alfred Rudolph Lorens, her cast-off sweetheart, fled with a Norwegian fisherman named Trygvve Nuggerud. Trying to escape in Nuggerud's small boat, they struck a reef. They were found, dead of thirst, by Capt. Borthen.

Next victim was Dr. Friedrich Ritter, German dentist. He died of poison—in the opinion of the investigator, a victim of murder. At any rate, his common-law wife, Frau Dore Koerwein, fled the island in terror.

Then it was said the Baroness and Philippson left the island in a yacht to found a new colony on some other southern island.

Investigation by Captain Borthen failed to disclose any ship at Charles Island within a month before or after the disappearance.

"I have talked with all the residents, native and foreign, of the Archipelago," Captain Borthen revealed. "They are firm in the declaration there were no ships at that time. The Baroness and her sweetheart could not have left the island. Also, they cannot be there and still be alive."

Captain Borthern said he and Manuel Cobos, customs official for the Ecuadorian government on nearby San Cristobal Island, had probed into the mystery. Cobos declared no ship could have come to the islands without clearings through his customshouse.

At the same time Captain Borthen, in company with his radio operator, Norman Rose, of Long Beach, Cal., searched in vain through an 18-mile jungle of mangroves for the bodies. They found bits of clothing and a trunk identified as having belonged to the Baroness, in the jungle near her erstwhile "island castle."

"The bodies are there somewhere, but it is nearly impossible to find them in that dense jungle growth," the captain said. "However, I'm going down again, and I'll stay with this thing until the mystery is entirely cleared up."

BAR BANNISTER ADMISSIONS FROM JURY

and harassed as shown by her quoted statement that she would say the seized baby was Betty Lake if it would help her children, that she was incapable of making a voluntary statement.

The ruling, a victory for the defense, brought no change to the stony countenance of the big woman in the prisoner's cage. She sat quietly dry-eyed for the noises, her gaze on the floor, her double-chin deep in the fur of her coat. The trial picked up speed.

Omar Lutes, station agent and forerunner at Pacific Junction, told of noting the bodies in lonely Ballast Pit Road. Lee H. Johnston threw a net of the vicinity of the Bannister home at Berry Mills, told of noting fresh foot tracks in new snow there Jan. 6, the morning after the tragedy.

Herbert Raywood, of Melrose, one of the jurors, wore his overcoat in the courtroom. He was ill yesterday.

Omar Lutes' wife told again of the barking of their dog on the night of the tragedy. The dog ran down the woods road yelping. Three persons were dying down in the few rods away and a baby was being carried away through the bush.

H. Murray Lamprell, state's counsel, asked her in cross-examination whether she knew if Betty Lake was in the cabin the night of the tragedy and she said she did not know.

FOUND ALCOHOL

Kent testified to finding two alcohol tins at the Lake cabin, but said he drew no conclusion from this that Lake had been smuggling alcohol.

Constable Alexander E. Wing, called from a sick bed, testified to measurements at the scene and identified the big hunting knife, alleged to have been Daniel's, as one he found in the snow near the cabin.

On February 13 Ewing went to Fox Creek to check Mrs. Bannister's story that a baby had been born in her cabin there and could find nobody who had seen her there, he testified.

Constable Reginald J. Kent testified to his investigation at the scene of the slayings and described finding a bundle of the road into the bush. Kent searched the ruins of the burned cabin in vain for the remains of the baby.

The next midnight Kent said he visited the Bannister home to check up on the baby. Mrs. Bannister was present when he questioned Arthur and Daniel for the first time.

At the request of Juror Raymond a two-hour recess was taken for lunch.

"Dictatorship Step"

Magill Sees "Cheka" in Senate

Chicago, March 16 (US)—Charging that the Black committee of the United States Senate is setting up an "American Cheka" and that it is the fifth and last step in attempting to establish a dictatorship in Washington modeled on European patterns, Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Investors, today called upon the people to resist.

Dr. Magill said in part:

"Those who would take from the courts the power to declare unconstitutional a law passed by Congress should bear in mind that such a change in our system of Government may prove a two-edged sword.

"The time may come when an ultra-conservative Congress perhaps dictated to by an executive of the same type might pass laws depriving the people of certain civil and religious rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

"Then those who may now favor this change, because they think their rights are safe under present conditions, would in that day appeal in vain to the courts but find themselves deprived of their constitutional rights as a result of the very change which they advocate today.

"Many good citizens, who are inclined to minimize danger, have felt that, notwithstanding these facts as stated, which cannot be denied, nevertheless our courts will protect our liberties. It must be borne in mind that our courts cannot continue to protect the people unless the people protect and preserve our courts.

Favorite Method

"The people must insist on maintaining the distribution of political power in the three departments of government as established by our Constitution. Therefore, the fifth step in the usurpation of power through the active co-operation of a majority of the members of one or both houses of Congress would be to harass, frighten and intimidate the free citizenry of our country that they will cease to denounce such usurpation which leads to the certain destruction of free government.

"The overcoming of all opposition by the people through intimidation and persecution has been a favorite method used by dictators and petty tyrants.

"All dictatorships have their secret inquisitors and secret police who go as far as they dare in the harassing and intimidation of the people.

"Is there in our country today an American Cheka?

"Thousands of American citizens, not only business men and business organizations, but women in their homes, against whom no just accusation of wrong doing can be charged, and who are guilty of no offense except the opposing of autocratic power and the upholding of the principles of free government, have been submitted to the harassing inquisition of the Black investigations committee, appointed by the Senate, and vested with tyrannical powers under Senate resolution No. 165, to investigate 'All efforts to influence, promote or retard legislation, either directly or indirectly.'

"Flu Test" Puzzle

"Have the American people no right to express their approval or disapproval with respect to pending legislation, or legislation already enacted which vitally affects them, without being subjected to investigation by inquisitors sent out by a committee of Congress?

"According to the authorities, Cadotte came here a week ago from Manchester, N. H. He left $37 to be sent to Mrs. Cadotte in case of good laws or to oppose the passage of bad laws?

"This Black investigating committee laden with power, was not satisfied with securing the approval by the Senate of the 'Investigation' of citizens, who might undertake to influence the passage of legislation, but secured from the Senate under Senate resolution No. 184, additional authority to investigate 'all efforts to influence, suppress or foment public sentiment.'

"Is it not true that any man who is of any account influences public sentiment? Every paper published is intended to influence public sentiment.

"Every public meeting held and every sermon preached is for this same purpose, the influencing of public sentiment. Yet, this petty oligarchy set up by the United States Senate would 'investigate,' which means that they would harass, annoy and intimidate any citizen who would 'influence public sentiment' in opposition to their schemes.

"Some of us, against whom no charge of wrong doing has been made, know from experience that workings of this American Cheka. Its real purpose is the same as the Russian Cheka, to frighten and intimidated and thereby to overcome all opposition to the continuance of the 'New instruments of public power' that have been built up by the New Deal during the past few years.

"This committee has attempted to suppress the influence of patriotic organizations which have dared to uphold the principle which the father of our country pleaded that all good citizens should uphold.

Snoopers Sent Out

"After the manner of the Russian Cheka, 'Snoopers' have been sent into business offices to annoy, harass and intimidate the officers, who are guilty of no wrong except their patriotic devotion to the constitution of our country.

"If this final step can be made effective, then indeed all actual dictatorship be established in America as certainly as such tyranny exists today in European countries where the executive, dominating a subservient legislative department has usurped all the powers of the government.

"The question is confronting every loyal American citizen is what shall be done to stop these encroachments upon the rights of American citizens. The challenge is to every true patriot who is willing to pay the price to preserve our liberties, whatever the price may be."

BUY AMERICAN MOVE STRONG IN WEST

New York, March 16 (US)—Broadening of interest in the national campaign that is urging the purchasing of American products was reported today by John W. Kieckhefer, president of the Made in America Club, Inc.

Kieckhefer, head of the Kieckhefer Container Company, of Milwaukee, indicated that this interest is not confined to the industrialists in 29 states who are associated in the movement.

Spending a vacation in Arizona, he sent a message to the executive headquarters of the organization in the Graybar building here. In this communication Kieckhefer said:

"While here I have had occasion to talk with a number of influential people about this movement. They all feel that it is very timely—that the campaign to Buy American should be pushed vigorously.

"To a man they agree it is the one thing that will eventually clear up the unemployment situation in the United States."

Kieckhefer stressed the fact that the movement should remain nonpartisan and kept divorced from politics. He declared people everywhere will be drawn to its standards in increasing numbers if this policy is adhered to.

He expressed the opinion that Captain Frank X. Eble, former United States commissioner of customs and now managing director of the Made in America Club, is right in advocating that the broad economic background of the movement should be given emphasis in its literature. Kieckhefer added:

"There is no reason why members of all political parties who wish to spur a business renaissance in the United States cannot become identified with the Made in America Club.

"This is a mass welfare movement in the best sense. All classes of the great American consuming public have a direct stake in its success. More payrolls will mean more buying power and more widely distributed pros-

Begs in Park, Gets Adopters For Babies

San Francisco, March 16 (AP)—A desperate young mother's decision to give away her two small daughters to strangers she had never seen, to save them from poverty and cold and dark basement, was disclosed today.

The plight of Mrs. Linda Jones, 22, came to light when Mrs. Elnar Simonsen told of a woman standing in a public park and asking passers-by:

"Don't you want a baby? My neighbor wants to give her baby away."

Mrs. Jones, who readily surrendered her claim when Mrs. Simonsen sought to adopt one of the little girls, said that Mrs. Kathleen Elder, a neighbor, to the park seeking foster parents for the children.

"I was desperate," the mother explained. "My husband and I had separated. There was nothing ahead of the children but hardships and hunger. The basement was dark and cold. They were undernourished."

Mrs. Jones said she did not know the name of the family that took her three-year-old daughter, "but I know they have given her a lovely home and that they intend to adopt her. I'm satisfied with that."

The third child was taken by the husband when the couple separated.

$25,000 Bail Set In Stabbing Affray

Attleboro, March 16—Charged with stabbing his brother with a carving knife, Leopold Guimond, 24, of Oak avenue, was held in $25,000 for the grand jury today.

Rudolph Guimond, 23, was reported improved at Sturdy Memorial Hospital, where transfusion was resorted to last night to save his life.

Parents tearfully forgave Leopold before he was taken to New Redford jail. The stabbing occurred yesterday in the Guimond home, when Rudolph protected his mother from Leopold, who had been drinking, according to police.

Suicide Embezzler Official's Partner

Detroit, March 16 (AP)—The Detroit News quotes William J. Curran, city controller, as saying he was a partner of Harry M. Tyler, assistant controller who committed suicide after discovery of a $345,000 shortage in city trust funds, in four stock market transactions.

Curran also was a stockholder in the Detroit Cripple Creek Gold Mining Co., of which Tyler was president, the News says.

"I have all the records of my transactions with Tyler," the controller is quoted as saying. "The transactions are an open book. I had no idea there was anything wrong in the city trust funds until this matter developed, and never had any reason to suspect Tyler of doing anything wrong."

Touhy, Gang Chief, On Trial in Holdup

Minneapolis, March 16 (AP)—"Terrible Tommy" Touhy—last of the leaders of the "Terrible Touhy" gang—was called to trial in federal court today on charges of robbing the United States mails.

The government accused him of handling a machine gun for a band of outlaws who raided the mail-shed of the Milwaukee railroad depot here Jan. 3, 1935. They escaped with pouches containing $78,000.

WRITES NOTE, KILLS SELF

Ronail Cadotte, 38, of Central avenue, Lynn, shot and killed himself today in his room by firing a small-calibre rifle bullet through his body.

Leaving a note to a Hocksett, N. H., relief, Cadotte locked himself in his room, placed the gun to his chest and fired, police said.

According to the authorities, Cadotte came here a week ago from Manchester, N. H. He left $37 to be sent to Mrs. Cadotte in case of good laws or to oppose the passage of bad laws?

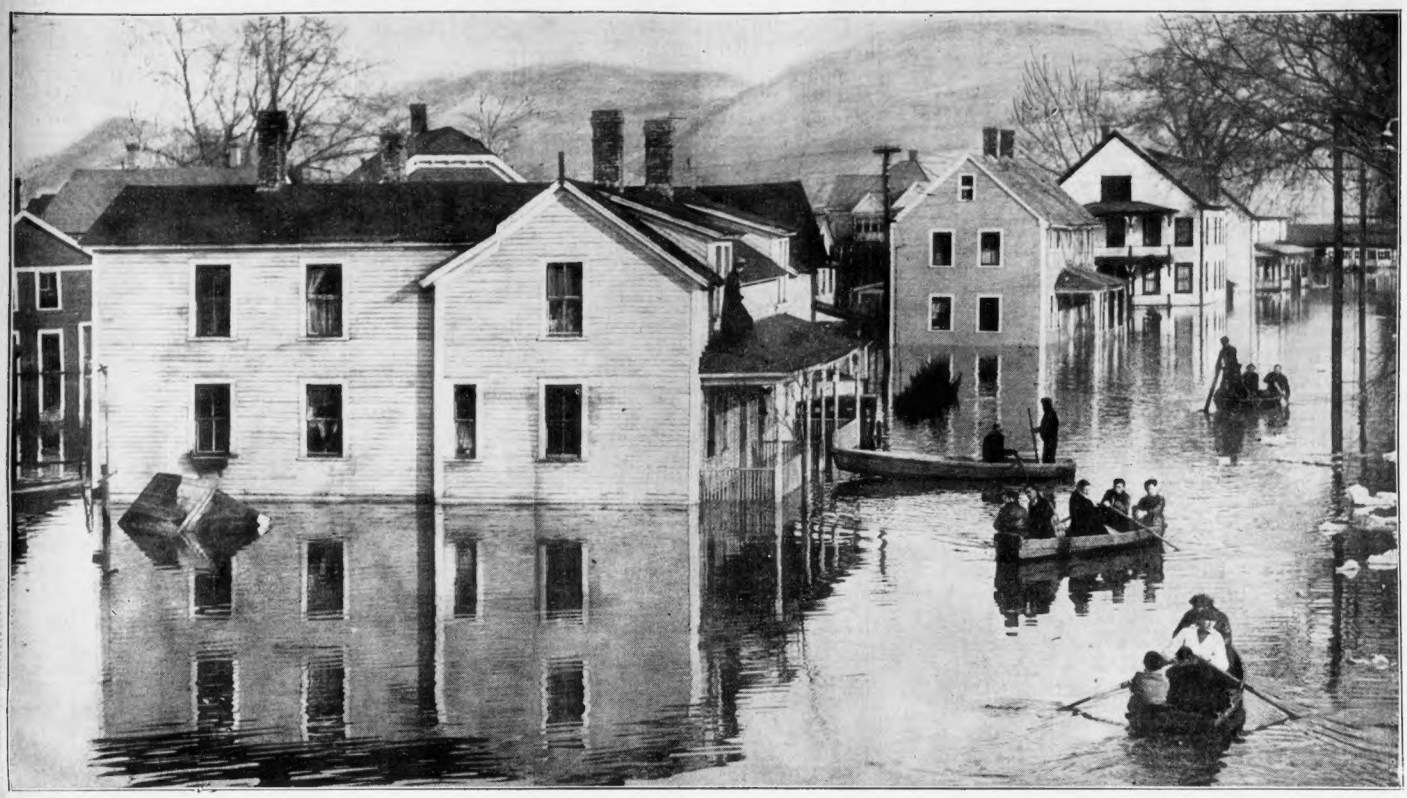
FLOOD SUFFERERS MAKE WAY TO CHURCH IN SMALL BOATS



SUNDAY MORNING IN NORTHAMPTON—It takes more than the worst flood in years to stop the residents of Northampton from attending church. With homes on Hockanum road individual islands in a flood lake boats were the only possible means of transportation. The scene shown above truly takes on the aspect of an American Venice. Notice particularly the boat which is seemingly headed for the front parlor of the home in the foreground. This picture gives an excellent idea of the depth water reached in many cities. Many were the prayers offered in churches here for relief from flood dangers. Youngsters enjoyed flood, but to their parents it meant suffering and loss of property.

NO LOOTING HERE—National Guardsmen were called out in Gardiner, Me., one of the hardest hit flood cities, to safeguard homes and stores from looting after menace of raging waters had caused hundreds to flee. Albert Albee of Company M is shown above doing patrol duty in the business section as citizens look on with interest at the unusual sight. Gardiner suffered tremendous property damage from flood waters of the Kennebec.

IT'S GOING TO BE A LONG, HARD JOB!—This scene, showing workmen clearing Water street, Gardiner, Me., of the huge ice cakes left by the receding flood waters of the Kennebec, is being enacted all over New England today. Men are shown battling debris with pick and shovel in a desperate effort to get traffic through as quickly as possible. But it will be many months before flood-damaged roadbeds can be repaired. Literally tons of ice cakes are shown in the picture above. Gardiner was extremely hard hit when the waters of the Kennebec went on the rampage.

Cosmopolitan Club Dinner Among Highlights of Week

By BETTY ALDEN

THOUGH IT IS the custom to forgo many social activities and pleasures during the Lenten season, art exhibits, fine concerts, garden club activities and other cultural affairs are in keeping with the spirit of the period . . . and so society turns its attention toward these . . .

MARY LODER

While all our social gardeners are absorbed in plans and preparations for the annual flower show at Mechanics Hall next week, they cannot help but be interested in what's going on in horticultural circles all over the country . . . for this is National Flower Week and in connection with it several events of very great interest to Garden Club members are taking place in New York . . . One is the International Flower Show opening at Grand Central Palace today, and the other is the dinner Thursday evening at the Cosmopolitan Club for ex-officers and ex-directors of the Garden Club of America . . .

Only a handful of people qualify for the privilege of attending this exclusive dinner party and among them are seven Bostonians . . . Mrs. Theodore E. Brown of Milton, Mrs. Edwin S. Webster of Chestnut Hill, who does most of her gardening at her summer home in Quisset; Mrs. Henry G. Vaughan of Sherborn and Berwick, Maine; Mrs. E. Lawrence Oliver, who summers in Cohasset; Mrs. N. Penrose Hallowell of Milton and New York, Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., of the North Shore and Mrs. Stephen Van R. Crosby of Beacon street, all of whom have been very active in the affairs of the Garden Club of America . . .

Though they may discuss everything from flowers to the European situation, one thing is certain, and that is that talk over plans for the spring pilgrimage to foreign gardens which special delegates of the Garden Club of America make every year . . . instead of Japan, where they saw all kinds of wonders a year ago, the lucky members who are chosen, and who can afford the expense of the trip, will probably greet the spring in the Luxembourg Gardens or the vast expanses of beauty and symmetry at Fontainbleau . . . outside of Paris . . .

While the Boston Symphony made "personal appearances" in other cities this week end, social Bostonians, who are in the habit of attending the Saturday evening concert, filled in the gap by going to hear Fabien Sevitzky and his ensemble at Jordan Hall . . . Some of Beacon Hill's top notch names were in the audience, the ladies all tastefully dressed in evening gowns and apparently delighted with the program . . . Among them we noted Mrs. Louis Frothingham, Mrs. Thomas Bradlee, Mrs. William Gaston, Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane, Mrs. George Lewis, Mrs. George Lee, Mrs. J. Dellinger Barney, with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Slayman . . .

Merry Group at Roller Skating Frolic

ROLLER SKATING PARTIES are getting to be quite a popular means of raising funds for charitable purposes . . . It may seem odd at first glance that sophisticated society girls and dignified young gentlemen should go in for such a boisterous, proletarian sport as roller skating, but when looking further into the matter, we find that the reason is quite a practical one . . .

These skating parties, simply gotten up, with no elaborate preparations, and no great overhead expense, actually make more money for the benefitting charity than many of the elaborate balls and dances . . .

Saturday evening the Junior Circle of the Florence Crittenton League was the beneficiary of the roller skating frolic at Moseley's which was chairmanned by Sylvie Weatherbee and an attractive group of post debs . . . Several hundred young Brooklinera, Newtonians and Wellesleyites were there, adding the noise and clatter of their skates to the general roar, and trying to holler above the din . . . Even though they couldn't talk much, the grins and smiles on everybody's face, were glowing evidence that they were finding it great fun to be natural and rollicking, in a scene as informal as anything could be . . .

Belmont Post Debs in Party

THERE WERE SO MANY there it would be difficult to name them all . . . but a few include Shirley Swain Johnson and her husband, Mary Jane Dewey and Kay Baker, two very popular post debs of Belmont; Mary Loder arm in arm with her fiance, Lou Niles, and Lucille Swift doing tricky steps with Phil Tucker . . . Joanna Palfrey looked very impish in a fitted red coat and Lucills Gilman wore a pretty coral sweater with dark skirt and hat . . .

Faith Barney had a corps of boy friends to lend their assistance when she tumbled, and she looked very pretty with her bangs brushed back off her forehead and wearing a beige angora sweater with a tomato color scarf . . . Still others in the jovial throng were Jack Knowles skating with Katherine Weatherbee, Janet and Lee Marston, Charlie Vallendar, Gordon McKissock, Chris Stanwood and Mary Elizabeth Stanwood, Madeline Kimpton, Elizabeth Marion, Freddie Sargent, Dottie [illegible] Mary Hastings, Jeanne Bachrach, Janet Knight, Dick [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wright, Jane Matthews and John [illegible]b Aiken, London, March 16 (AP)—The divorce court granted Edmund Owen Farnley-Whittingstall a decree nisi today against the former Eileen Bennett, international tennis player. The suit was not defended.

Miss Dexter Hostess at Meeting

MISS ROSE L. DEXTER will open her Beacon street home tomorrow afternoon for the annual meeting of the Church Home Society.

The guest speaker will be Judge Kenneth D. Bingham of Quincy Juvenile Court, and president of the Massachusetts Conference of Social Work, who will speak on "A Children's Jurist Considers Child Welfare and Crime Prevention."

A dramatic skit, "The Dollar Poor and Penny Wise," will be given by four members of the board of directors of the Penny Wise Thrift Shop, under the direction of Mrs. Harold C. Sears, a past president. This skit presents a series of seven brief episodes showing the Penny Wise Thrift Shop in its various aspects of service.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Edward D. Harlow of Concord, who is a director and chairman of the Associates, short three-minute reports will be read by the eight district chairmen.

Books on Parade

By MILES ALDEN

HARVARD COLLEGE IN THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY—Two Volumes—Samuel Eliot Morison—Harvard University Press.

Professor Morison, with seemingly endless space at his disposal, has filled these two generous volumes on the last half of the seventeenth century with a scholarly array of absorbing facts, anecdotes and records of an earlier Harvard.

The narrative starts with the granting of the first charter to President Henry Dunster by the General Court of the Massachusette Colony to the restoration of the charter in 1707 to President John Leverett.

They were lean years for the young struggling college on the banks of the Charles, which by the way were considerably nearer the Yard than they are today.

The enthusiasm of the Puritans for higher learning was noticeably dampened when appeals for funds were made. The story is told of one town meeting called for such a purpose where fifty of the fifty odd gathered left abruptly when the subject was broached.

But of the college itself the story of these years is the story of the appetite for learning emerging triumphant over the more unsatisfied appetite of the scholars after the small portions served at commons.

Professor Morison has made the student of the 17th century a flesh and blood youth, usually at odds with the harsher restraints of Puritanism, and ever ready for a penny ale at the one tavern open to them.

There is a wealth of detail in the books covering every conceivable angle of college life and structure. The illustrations, and there are many of them, are a short history of the period in themselves.

But there is one embracing criticism to these books, which form the part of a greater series, four of which have already appeared:

That a complete history of Harvard was crying to be written there can be no argument.

But whether that history should have taken the form of a series so long and detailed as to put it beyond the purpose, and more important the interest, of the average reader is doubtful.

Harvard is of suffient national importance to warrant a shorter history with greater emphasis placed on her role as the intellectual frontier of a new world.

Fashion Shows Draw Crowds

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

THE SUBURBS had its flood, Boston had its deluge of week-end fashion shows, luncheons, concerts and teas.

The round started auspiciously with Junior Philomathea style parade at the Chalet Friday night.

Alumnae of Elmhurst Academy did their style complex up rather individually with a talk on Parisian openings by Dorothy Kelly, well-known stylist and a graduate of Eden Hall, another Sacred Heart school in a Philadelphia suburb.

Alice Hurley in her capacity as the group's president was the day's hostess, her cherry red dress and beige hat most attractive. Mrs. Francis James, smartly togged in black with gilt ornaments, entertained a number of friends at luncheon.

Younger alumnae gathered about Mrs. Joseph Barry's luncheon table for an exchange of travel chat . . . her burgundy frock had a vestee of white crepe and her sister, Virginia Foley, chose black matelasse, trimmed with brilliants.

Mrs. Charles Donovan motored up from Swampscott . . . a red tunic topped her black crepe skirt and matching flowers trimmed her black rough straw. Mrs. Francis McCarthy was smart in bright green and a Mandarin hat of stitched taffeta.

Mrs. John F. Fitzgerald, Jr. of Milton could easily have been a mannequin in her pencil-striped tailleur . . . complete with wine carnation and shallow straw sailor and Mrs. Joseph Gargon's black and white print had a ruching of white organdie.

Mrs. M. F. Foley held forth at another table entertaining friends and renewing acquaintances after her extended tour of Miami, Havana and Pinehurst. She wore black accessories with her mink and similar fur trimmed Mrs. C. J. Bowen's black coat.

Alice Fitzpatrick's frock took its inspiration from the Gibson girl . . . It was decidedly gay ninety-ish with its leg-of-mutton sleeves and organdie ruffling its neckline. Mrs. Hugh Nawn, another active Sacred Heart alumna, wore a silver fox scarf with her tailored suit and Mrs. Clement Dore was smart in a flowered crepe and Breton sailor.

A parade of spring ensemble, an afternoon of bridge and fashion comments by Anne Ford were the highlights of Proparvulis Club bridge at the Copley-Plaza. Paul and Billy McNamara and Baby Claire Kelliher added their share to the afternoon's enjoyment with their finished song and dance numbers.

Another highlight of the day was the display of children's togs. Mary Jane Comerford, whose mother, Mrs. Charles Comerford, was the organization's first president, made her appearance in a nautical outfit of navy and white flannel and again skipped down the runway in a tailored ensemble of blue tweeds.

Julia Clarke and Helen Lafferty deserve a vote of thanks for their efficiency. Julia chose navy and green shees for her bridge ensemble, and Helen was smart in grey tweeds.

Grace Maloney brought a group of friends to the bridge to glimpse her debut as a model . . . Betty and Jean Shea of Dorchester, Martha Hurley, her black crepe frock sporting a vestee of white pique, and Betty Rohan of Ware in a smart ensemble of black and white.

LOVE'S LITANY

By Helen Livingston

CHAPTER 36

And Donny loved them. He loved everything. He really seemed to know it was Christmas. Even Donald was happy playing with him, showing him the wonders of the tree, and making the monkey run up and down the string.

But his eyes filled when she gave him her present, a sweater that she had knit for him, and that almost, but not quite, fitted him.

"And I haven't anything for you."

"Darling! You already gave me my present! The chocolates!"

"Oh—that—"

He thought of last year. Of a pearl evening bag he had bought in an exclusive shop. Of a great pot of lilies of the valley he had ordered the florist to send home. Of the chocolates he had not bothered to mention at all.

His heart ached with love and gratitude to her because she didn't care.

Sitting up, admiring the baby's tree, after the dishes were done and Donny asleep, they popped corn over the coals in the fireplace, and talked about next year, when things would be different.

"When I'm out of this mess, and have proper recognition," he thought.

"When the estate is settled, and I come into my own," she thought.

And each thought the other was thinking his thought.

So, for a little while they dreamed together, happily.

In the spring, when the acacia trees were sweet with their feathery yellow bloom, and flowering fruit trees all over Berkley burst into pink and white and coral glory, Christie's attorney, Nelson Pierce, drove up to Spanish Pass to talk to some of the people who had known Adolphus Cooper.

"Want to come?" he had asked her.

Want to come? Her whole being ached with homesickness for the mountains. To smell the pines. To feel the slippery pine needles thick under her feet.

To see the first wild flowers, Buttercups, Indian paint brush, Jennie Jump Ups, and the little wild violets, purple and white.

Above all, to see the old house again. Just to look at it from the outside. Even that would be heaven.

But she couldn't ask Janet Woods to keep Donny for a whole day, and she couldn't take him on such a long drive.

"N—no—I don't believe I do," she told him.

So he went alone, and just to keep her mind off of it she spent the day washing woodwork and windows, and waxing floors, pausing only long enough to rescue Donny from the corners he got into with his "walker," loaned by Janet whose "Sister" didn't need it any more, and to answer him as he received his vocabulary over and over—

"Mmmm—Dada — Mummum — Dada—"

"Yes, darling! Mummum is listening—Daddy will come bye and bye."

Three-Way Frock Intrigues Fashion Congress

IT'S the slyest little thing—this basic black crepe dress which won a Fashion Congress award—so cleverly does it lead its triple life that no one will ever guess it's your whole spring wardrobe. In the beginning, the cut and fabric of the basic dress have not been slighted in favor of the triple-change of accessories . . . details are simple but very nice, and the frock is cut to fit the waist and hips snugly, with an unobstrusive but graceful flare. The crepe is smooth and rich, promising unquenchable freshness in the face of numerous trips to the cleaner.

Each accessory strikes a different mood. For instance, the crisp, plaided taffeta tuck-in scarf, and the plaid cuffs edging the wide bracelet sleeves (extra cuffs snap into the sleeves), are pinafore-fresh and young. Again, the scalloped pink linen triple-row collar the model displays recalls all the nicest, daintiest things you've ever owned. Cuffs to match ruffle over the hands, reaching nearly to the fingers. And a "Forbidden Fruit" print (apples in impossible, gay colors) makes the weskit, which ties around the waist, shown at the right.

Shiny black straw whirls above the eyebrows in a coolie-beret, which surprisingly develops a tab on the back of the head for safe and comfortable anchorage. Miss Janice Miner, Wellesley debutante, models.

For shopping information on the three-way frock or the hat, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Given In Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 108

FOLLOWI a habit of years, I did not utter a sound when Lillian seated herself with her elbows on her knees and her chin cupped in her palms.

Her silent self-communion lasted fully a minute. Then, springing to her feet, she made a curious gesture with her hands, as if she were brushing something aside, and moved briskly toward the telephone.

"We may as well call up the reserves," she said with a smile, and gave a number which I recognized as being that of the nearest post of state troopers.

Her conversation was crisp and brief. She asked for the head officer, gave her name, my father's, and repeated a set of cryptic numbers twice—patently identification which he was writing down. Then she asked that three men be sent as fast as possible to the bank, and that they be told to stand guard there until our errand was safely accomplished. She told them frankly that we feared an attempt might be made to rob the bank before morning.

Taking down the receiver again, she gave another number—that of the Ticer farm house. She was looking at me as she gave it, and, at my involuntary look of surprise, she laughed lightly.

"No; I'm not depending on the Ticer father and son for protection," she murmured, and then spoke into the receiver.

SECRET SERVICE MEN

It was but a few seconds before she spoke again.

"Miller? That's what I call service! I want you and the others to come over to the farm house as quickly as possible. Come across the fields, there's a rough path which won't hurt your car, and there are reasons why I don't want you to come by the road. All right. We'll be all ready for you."

She hung up the receiver and turned to me briskly.

"They're going to be angry, aren't they, when they find out?" I asked a bit apprehensively.

"They're going to be good and sore," she answered, "but I can't help it. We can't handle Sam Bristow, and they can, and after this spiel of Ronald's, it seems to me that the thing nearest our hands is to get that box safely over here."

House Lilies

"SPRING IS HERE," SAY LILY BELLS

NOTHING hurries spring along like the fragrant little bells of lily-of-the-valley, inspiring on dull days, gay in the returning sun.

It's time to be starting to grow this dainty favorite, either in pots, or in water and sand.

Florists sell imported pips, specially treated for quick blooming. They have flowers in three or four weeks after planting.

Imported pips are not so good for the garden, however, as are clumps grown in American nurseries or in your neighbor's garden. And of course the American-grown pips are good for indoor forcing, though they do not bloom quite so quickly as the imported. If you have a lily-of-the-valley patch, it probably needs thinning. So pot the pips you remove and have some early flowers indoors.

Of course, there's plenty more to be said about planting house-plants in the garden for the summer. You will find specific, practical help in our 40-page illustrated Home Institute booklet, Success With House Plants and Flowers. Reliable tips from a real "dirt gardener." All about forcing bulbs, repotting, controlling pests, every plant problem.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

STREAMLINES may be neither flattering nor healthful for you. Normal weight is relative and is determined not only by structure, but by the length of time you and the fat have been keeping company, which may have complicating internal effects.

After fat plays havoc with your figure, it strikes at the vital organs, and the condition of these organs is a chief consideration in the amount of weight to be lost.

Before you proceed with your figure program, take into account weight in relation to your health. Perhaps you shouldn't try to achieve your once-upon-a-time slim figure. Be satisfied with the weight that is best for you.

If you have been carrying your burden of fat for more years than you care to count, you may find it unwise to attempt to lose all the excess. It is possible that you should not try for normal weight. Consult your doctor. Should he, for any reason, consider that you have reduced enough, even though you are not down to normal weight, abide by his decision.

Another thing, if you are fashioned on a big scale, no amount of dieting will make you into the willowy type. Generous proportions look better with ample adipose tissue, and regardless of fashions, streamlines are not your style. Of course, an overabundance of fat is always objectionable, but your weight should be slightly above the average for your height.

Adjust your calories to meet your larger requirements. With your large frame, a thousand calories a day may be dangerously inadequate, both for your health and for your figure. A calorie deficit for your basic needs impairs health. Then, too, strenuous dieting in your case will leave you with a gaunt look.

Exercise must also be considered in your program, not only from the figure standpoint, but from the health angle. Every normal individual requires a certain amount of regular exercise for muscle tone and for protection of the vital organs. The exercises most serviceable are those which use the large trunk muscles of the body in some form of activity leading to exercise habits. Do the type of exercise that you enjoy and you will be more likely to keep it up. Walking, hiking, swimming, golf, and all out-of-door activities are good health habits to supplement the daily dozen for your figure.

When you have your figure down to regulation size for you, let well enough alone. Keep the slim health habits you have established to stabilize your weight. Contrast these with the habits of the stout. Invariably, they have a toast and coffee breakfast, go lightly at luncheon, and make up for both meals by eating an enormous dinner. That is exactly why they stay overweight. A hearty dinner or meal late at night is the most fattening one of the day. Spread the calories over the day and you will find that you can eat more and accumulate less weight.

Never carry reducing to extremes. Your healthy weight is normal and the most flattering to your figure.

New Joy Cap Aids Bath

By ARLINE GOULD

HAVE you seen the new joy cap for the bath? It's the most colorful affair imaginable—water resilient and moisture-proof—and assures perfect protection for curls and wave while bathing.

You can plunge under torrents of water from the shower or relax in the luxury of a real "steam" bath, but your hair will remain unaffected beneath the cap, for it is both waterproof and non-curl disturbing.

It's an exact replica of an aviatrix's cap, and comes in a wide selection of colors (to match your shower curtain) from gay, riotous ones in Mexican red, maize, green, wine and blue to soft pastel and flesh tone.

There is no trick in putting on the cap. It is as simple as one, two, three. It is slipped on the head, forehead first, and then drawstrings pulled tight and tied under the chin.

Your ringlets, large or small, are captured and protected in this cap. Water can come in torrents or there can be waves of steam during the process, but the hair remains undisturbed.

The joys of the bath reach new heights with this flattering, shower cap. You can come straight from your hairdresser's, plunge under the shower and not a single curl or wave will be damaged or disturbed in the process of donning or removing the cap.

Women who have put up with the discomfort of the old-fashioned tight, curl-disturbing type of bathing cap, will welcome this new arrival with glee. It is inexpensive and you have a choice of colors to fit in with your own bath's color scheme.

If you would like to know the name of this aviatrix shower cap and the store where it is sold, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Style Show

P. S.—At this week's session of the Martha Lee Homemakers school on Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon, Scott Furriers will present some of the first Spring fashions. This will include a showing of a complete wardrobe.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

The following guest column is published in response to hundreds of requests from girl members of the organization for information regarding the work of hostesses. The article describes a definite future opportunity for the Junior Birdwomen of today.

By RUTH CROMAN, R. N.
Stewardess, American Airlines

Among the great number of girls who read the Junior Birdmen columns it is not inconceivable to imagine that there are many who are planning for themselves careers as airplane stewardesses, for this is one of the most interesting jobs on the feminine horizon.

RUTH CROMAN

But, like everything else that is desirable, it must be worked for. Years must be spent in training and the training is not easy.

The requirements, which must be met by a girl who wants to work on the planes of American Airlines, are:

She must be less than 25 years of age. She must weigh less than 126 pounds. She must be less than 5 feet 6 inches in height. She must have health and character of the best. She must have poise, grace, and the ability to think. She must be a registered graduate nurse.

The first five are not particularly difficult for the average girl to meet, but the sixth—that "R. N." after her name—that means three long years of hard work and intensive training in a hospital, and a nurse's cap is a badge of honor that is not acquired easily.

Hundreds of young women try for it every year and fail to qualify because of lack of backbone and dislike of discipline.

Stewardesses spend their working hours at altitudes anywhere from five to 15,000 feet, in modern transport planes. They play bridge with passengers, serve their meals, answer their questions, take care of their children, make up berths at night and waken them in the morning, as casually as you please, while the plane speeds through the heavens at 200 miles an hour!

(Editor's note: The salary paid to the stewardesses beginning this work is approximately $125 a month, depending on the air line and length of service.)

Girls are on duty two days and are off every third day. Our company has a training school in Chicago to which all girls are sent when first employed, to get the feet of the aviation business and to learn their clerical duties.

Although the supply of stewardesses now far exceeds the demand, this will not always be so. Girls who plan to go in training now might well apply for a position as air stewardess in three or four years, as who knows but by that time there will be a shortage.

St. Patrick's Day Menu

Luncheon With True Irish Touch

ST. PATRICK'S DAY is a rollicking time for a luncheon party. Guests dote on the gay color, the hilarious games, and the festive food.

It's important that the party table be jolly, too, so let's plan a few simple decorations to amuse them.

First, cover the table with a piece of shiny green oilcloth, then arrange plain white dishes with crystal glassware, symmetrically in place. Center the table with a sizable cake, iced with fluffy white frosting and dotted with green candy shamrocks scattered over the surface.

To make these shamrocks, cut out petals and stems from green gum drops and fashion them into shape on the cake. Next place a ring of tiny green candles all around the outer rim of the cake plate, and light them just before you begin to serve.

In front of each guest's plate set a small clay pipe filled with green candies. You might also print the guests' names in green ink on the pipe stems in lieu of place cards. Then serve this menu with an Irish accent and your party will be great fun:

Cream of Green Pea Soup
Paprika Wafers
Celery Curls
Stuffed Spanish Olives
Radish Roses
Stuffed Pepper Salad, Shamrock Style
Corn Muffins Apple Butter
Angel Food Cake
Pistachio Ice Cream
Coffee

STUFFED GREEN PEPPER SALAD, SHAMROCK STYLE

2 large green peppers
2 packages cream cheese
¼ cup stuffed Spanish olives, chopped
Chopped green peppers
½ teaspoon salt

Wash peppers, cut off tops (chop and reserve for use in filling) and remove seeds. Cream the cheese, add chopped olives and green pepper, and salt. Fill peppers with mixture and thoroughly chill. Slice thin with sharp knife and arrange three slices like a shamrock on a bed of crisp lettuce. Use a small strip of green paper for a stem. Serve with mayonnaise.

ANGEL FOOD CAKE

1 1-3 cup egg whites
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon flavoring (vanilla, orange, peppermint, etc.)
1 cup flour

Beat egg whites with flat whip until frothy. Add cream of tartar and salt; continue beating until a point of the egg whites will stand upright when the whip is pulled out. Gradually beat in 1 cup of the sugar which has been sifted twice. Fold in the flavoring.

Sift flour once before measuring; sift three times with the remaining half-cup of sugar and fold into the mixture. Pour batter into ungreased angel food pan. Bake in a slow oven at least one hour. Begin at 275 deg. F. and after 30 minutes increase heat slightly (325 deg. F.) and bake 30 minutes longer. Remove from oven and invert pan for one hour or until cold.

Menu for Tomorrow

BREAKFAST
Grapefruit Juice
Milk Toast
Raisin Bread Butter
Coffee Milk

LUNCH
Eggs Caruso
Cole Slaw
Bread and Butter
Apple Sauce
Tea Milk

DINNER
Stuffed Potatoes with Ham
Glazed Carrots
Green Beans Fried Bananas
Bread and Butter
Baked Custard
Coffee

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How Can Family of Ten Exist on Income of $12 a Week?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am writing to you for advice and help. I have a problem that is driving me to distraction. Can you tell me how to feed, clothe, pay rent, electric light, gas and other bills on 12 dollars a week?

There are ten of us in the family, my oldest boy being 25. No matter how hard they try, not one of the children can get work. All my sons and daughters are out every day, going from one factory to another and from office to office. But it is always hopeless.

Miss Fairfax, I am telling you the truth when I say that my husband and I have slaved for 25 years to bring up a family that would be a credit to any couple in America. We've sacrificed, gone without good clothes and medical care just to see that our girls and boys had every advantage we could possibly give them.

What can we do? Please give us a word of hope. This no work and no money business will send me to the grave. MRS. H.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This is the prize-winning letter for today. It is typical of the many I receive from poor families all over New England. The five-dollar check I am sending Mrs. H. will be welcome, I know. Equally welcome, I hope, will be the checks I have ready for others who write "best letters."

No woman can buy food and clothing for a family of 10 on $12 a week. It is impossible. The best she can hope to do is to purchase the barest necessities of life and pray for a better day.

My advice to Mrs. H. is to go to the Mayor of her city and to request him to give work to one or two of her sons. It happen to know that her city is undertaking several projects and will be able to provide many jobs. Certainly here is a deserving family and it should receive some recognition.

Though I have a hard and fast rule against discussing politics, I will say right now that the WPA and other relief agencies were created to take care of the needs of worthy people. Unfortunately, there are too many political hangers-on eating up the money in numerous cities and towns throughout the country.

I strongly urge Mrs. H. to encourage her family to continue their job-hunting. Conditions are bad—terribly hard. Few realize this more than I. But success always comes to those who refuse to accept defeat.

Here is an unusual letter that comes to me this morning from Massachusetts city:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My problem is that I have fallen in love with my husband's sister—my step-son. I am 32. He is 24.

We are constantly together, living under one roof. My husband likes nights and is unable to go to the theaters, dances and parties. I don't see how anyone could blame me for taking my self to Cohasset. I find it.

My step-son returns the love I have for him. He wants me to divorce his father and he has promised to be a witness in my defense.

Love with me is stronger than common sense. What can I do about it?

MRS. R.

DEAR FRIEND:

You're cutting yourself a large slice of unhappiness. And it is my opinion that you thoroughly deserve all the tears you are bound to shed.

A woman almost 40 should have more sense than to encourage the affections of a boy young enough to be her son. The child probably THINKS he is in love with you now. Five years later he will wake up. Heaven help you then.

There's a whole generation separating you and him. Remember that. Also keep in mind the fact you'll never to able to completely sever the tie that binds father to son.

If you get the divorce, that tie will haunt you as long as you live. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Here is another interesting letter:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 22 who has never been out alone. My parents are terribly old-fashioned.

For the past six months a man of 38 has been calling at our house. A week ago he asked me to marry him. I should like to, as he has plenty of money and would buy me the things I've always wanted.

What would you do? C. L.

DEAR CHILD:

I'd go out with this man and know him better before I ever thought of marrying him. Also I'd take a look at other men.

At 22 you have the right to live as a free human being. Tell your father and mother that you are a WOMAN.

Apparently they have been confusing you with the family canary.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl of 17, very much in love with a young man of 22. The only trouble is this boy is in love with a girl with whom he used to keep company before he met me.

What shall I do?

SO LONELY.

DEAR LITTLE FRIEND:

If you are sure the boy is in love with another girl, the best thing to do is to look for a young man who will like ONLY you. Triangles are bad when they come of their own accord. Sensible girls will avoid stepping into them.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Influence of Diet on Health

-:- Dr. Royal S. Copeland -:-

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

A FRIEND of mine recently remarked, "What a pity that medical science has not discovered a way to dissolve kidney stones."

He was pleased when I told him of the recent progress being made in this direction.

Some persons are extremely susceptible to this annoying and often serious complaint. It will be comforting for them to know that for many years extensive research has been carried on with a view to solving the problem.

It is the accepted idea that stones form as a result of some disturbance in the lining of the kidney, the tube leading from the kidney to the bladder. Indeed, the stone may form in the bladder. In most cases, certainly, infection plays an important part in the formation of stones.

Nutrition and diet have their influence. It has been urged that a diet deficient in vitamin A will lead to trouble. To escape this many doctors now prescribe halibut liver oil or cod liver oil. This treatment, in combination with an acid ash diet, may actually lead to the breaking down of the stones.

Do not be misled into the belief that all stones can be easily dissolved. Too much must not be expected, because the treatment is not yet perfected. Until then every precaution must be taken to prevent undue damage to the kidneys.

What do I mean by an "acid ash diet"?

Certain foods increase the acidity of the body, while others tend to reduce and overcome acidity. The former produce an acid ash, which is the thing the author of the article referred to is advocating. In general, it may be said that the cereals, meat, fish, oysters, eggs, especially the yolks, and a few fruits like plums, cranberries and prunes, are acid forming.

And If It's An Adorable Blouse

to wear with your tailored suit you're looking for—your search is ended! For I found the best looking tailored blouses in Leed's that I've seen in ages and ages. I've sketched just two of the swanky blouses I saw—and, the smart linen blouse sketched on the charming young lady comes in plum, navy, brown, green and white—and it's only $1.98. Then there's the "Tuxedo" shirt that has taken all the smart things by storm! Both the linen blouses and the "Tuxedo" shirt have the tiny details we expect to find only in much, much higher priced blouses. Do go in and see them—you'll adore both styles. The cute Tuxedo comes in lovely quality pique, in white with a cunning black bow tie. You'll want the linen in more than one color, I'll wager—and I know you'll never be able to resist buying the "Tuxedo." Oh, by the way the Tuxedo is priced at only $1.98, too! Leed's Furriers is at 35 Winter St. Mail orders.

There's Magic In It!

Never within my memory have I seen neckwear so shamelessly feminine—so divinely colorful as this I've sketched from Jordan's. I tell you there's magic in this neckwear—there airy bits can do the most amazing things to you. If you want to look positively irresistible—just tuck either of these under your chin—and you'll be amazed at the effect. Both of these charming, utterly feminine pieces were inspired by the neckwear worn by Antoinette MacDonald in "Rose Marie." My sketch couldn't possibly do justice to the Lace Vestee with its foamy ruffles and charming flowers—it will flatter you every second you have it on! Comes in luscious shades of beige and coral. Of course, in white. And it's only $3. The collar with its flattering flower at the throat is of all silk Lingesoie—a delightfully sheer—yet crisp and fresh material. It will add a piquant touch to your tailored suit—or completely disguise last year's frock. Comes in lovely soft shades of fresh coral, turquoise, navy and white. It's only $2 in the Jordan Marsh Company Neckwear Department, street floor.

7 CONSTITUTION AMENDMENTS GAIN O. K.

Seven amendments to the state constitution were reported favorably today by the legislative committee on constitutional law.

The reports will be considered later by a joint session of the legislature.

Two of the amendments seek to change the manner of filling vacancies in the executive council, and two others seek to eliminate the "pauper" section in the election provisions.

Other proposed changes would give cities and towns the right to spend money to attract industries, give the legislature authority to levy excise taxes and taxes on intangible personal property; and give the legislature the power to limit taxes on real property.

PAUPER PROVISION

Senator Charles A. P. McAree and Rep. Charles H. Morrill, both of Haverhill, are petitioners for elimination of the provision which prevents paupers from voting at state elections.

Representative Frank L. Floyd of Manchester is petitioner for the amendment to give the Legislature the right to prescribe by law how vacancies in the executive council shall be filled. Another provides for a special election.

TAX PROPOSALS

Representative Rubin of Fall River filed the petition calling for appropriations by cities and towns to spend money to attract industries, while Senator Thomas H. Burke of Boston is sponsor for those giving the General Court power to ivy taxes on intangible property and to limit taxes on real estate.

The committee also reported favorably on memorializing Congress in favor of withdrawing diplomatic relations with Germany and Mexico.

House Eyes Election

Landon Gaining Wide Following

By GEORGE ROTHWELL BROWN

Washington, March 16 (US)—A presidential preferential poll of the Republican House members, that is being taken by Republicans themselves, and is now nearing completion, reveals most strikingly the nation-wide extent of the following which Governor Alf M. Landon has gained in the country at large, without neglecting his duties as governor of Kansas, to stump the country for delegates.

The poll thus far is said to reflect an 80 per cent preference for the Kansas governor on the part of the 100 members on the Republican side of the House, many of whom are from states which are supporting other men.

The significant thing about the poll, which has been under way for nearly a week, is that it is confirmatory of reports from various parts of the country, from leading Republicans.

A part of the feeling among Republicans already in Congress that Governor Landon embodies most of the attributes which opponents of the New Deal everywhere are coming to regard as essential, grows out of the fact that the Kansas governor is unwilling to endanger party harmony elsewhere, by participation in an active canvass.

Popularity

Governor Landon is the enthusiastic choice of a purely agricultural state in the Middle West with great prestige in the immediate agricultural region of which the state is the center.

Yet Governor Landon without making the slightest personal effort, but for reasons wholly psychological, and almost fateful has become the national candidate in states of diversified industries of the rapidly growing opposition to all that the New Deal stands for.

Here, in part, is the explanation of why a beaten trail is being made today from all parts of the country across the attractive square in Topeka, in the center of which stands the state capitol of Kansas.

Not since the pilgrimages of Republicans to the porch of William McKinley in Canton Ohio in 1896, have so many voluntary travelers journeyed to the home city of a distinguished governor.

Most of these Topeka pilgrims are not nationally known figures. Not since McKinley's time has any Republican governor been able to get such a cross section of national sentiment, at first hand, without stirring from his own doorstep, as Governor Landon is gaining today.

Solid Personality

He has a receptive mind. He listens well, speaks frankly, gives of his opinions freely. Few leave him—and he sees all who come to his door—without carrying away with them a vivid impression of a singularly solid personality.

These pilgrimages to Topeka have been going on now for quite a long time. Impressions of the governor have naturally been carried everywhere. This explains why one will hear Governor Landon of Kansas, spoken of with such understanding in states where ordinarily Kansas has been a sealed book.

No wonder that Republicans in Congress, whose own fortunes depend so largely upon their standard bearer in November, are showing such marked interest in the governor of Kansas.

LANDON LEADS IN OKLAHOMA

Oklahoma City, March 16 (AP)—With many leaders outspoken for Cleveland delegates instructed for Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas for President, Oklahoma Republicans came here today to decide whether the majority of the State delegation would be pledged to the Kansan.

James S. Twyford, Oklahoma City, was scheduled to head the resolutions committee and sound the call for Landon.

Six of the 15 national convention delegates named at district conventions have been instructed to vote for Landon, and nine are uninstructed. The six delegates-at-large to be named today complete the delegation. Landon is the only person endorsed by any district.

A group of delegates led by E. E. Drake, Oklahoma City, and joined by a scattering of supporters of Senator Borah and Colonel Frank Knox, held a protest meeting late last night. Most of the fire, however, was directed at so-called "unofficial commanders" of the party and Landon was not an issue.

New Deal Administration Might Learn From Kansas

—FROM THE PATERSON (N. J.) CALL—

It would be an excellent idea if the Congress of the United States were to adjourn for a month or two and undertake an "investigation" of the fiscal policies of Kansas, or if it can't spare the time to do this then it could invite Governor Landon before it and learn something about economical and efficient governmental practices.

Kansas has no state debt. It has a fine road system developed on the "pay-as-you-go" plan, as were all other public improvements. It has a fine, new capitol building. It has first class schools. And it has few of the special or nuisance taxes that afflict most other commonwealths.

Today American people of all occupations and all income levels are coming to realize that their greatest enemy is high taxes—and that their greatest problem is taxation.

The federal government has been spending about twice its receipts for the past five or more years, and apparently there is no end to it, judging from the spending plans that are being discussed. The result has been frightened capital, discouraged investors, industrial retrogression, unemployment and foreclosures.

Kansas, too, went through the depression and its agricultural population had no easier time than the population of industrial states. Yet, notwithstanding this, Kansas has continued its pay-as-you-go policy, doing without things which it could not afford, but neglecting no necessary public service.

If Kansas can do this other states of the nation and the federal government would do well to learn something about the financial and economic policies which are being carried into effect so satisfactorily in the Sunflower State which have made Governor Landon into one of the leading candidates for the Republican presidential nomination.

SPINAL DEATHS MOUNT TO 27

Two more deaths from spinal meningitis occurred today in Boston, increasing the total deaths from this disease this year in Massachusetts to 27.

Harry Cohen, 34, of 38 Ransom road, Brighton, died at Beth Israel hospital, and Herbert Sweet, 69, a former resident of Roxbury, died at Long Island hospital.

Sweet's death was the 15th among inmates and employes of the city institution.

3 SWAMPSCOTT SAFES ROBBED

Safecrackers, practically under the noses of Swampscott police, smashed three safes early today in offices of the Swampscott Town Hall, but gained little loot.

Entrance to the Town Hall, which adjoins the Swampscott police station, less than 50 feet distant, was gained through a rear window on the first floor.

Doors of the tax collector and town clerk, the town treasurer and the park commissioner offices were jimmied and the knobs of the safes knocked off, apparently with a sledge hammer.

Town Treasurer James A. Libbey declared there had been no money in his safe, and Ralph Merritt, town clerk and tax collector, and Leonard Burdett, park commissioner, said there was little of value in them although they could not state definitely what was gone until they had made a complete check.

Borah and Knox Battle in Illinois

Chicago, March 16 (AP)—Senator William E. Borah and Col. Frank Knox, seeking the endorsement of the state's voters in the April 14 primary, climb into the ring this week to begin their only scheduled test of strength as rival aspirants to the Republican presidential candidacy.

Col. Knox, who last week said "our chief concern is to win the Illinois primary," starts a six-city speaking tour downstate on Wednesday. Senator Borah invades the state Saturday.

Elevator Strikers Return to Jobs

New York, March 16 (AP)—Building service employes returned to their old posts today, with charges by the union that 400 men had been refused reinstatement.

Union headquarters announced that 22 realty firms had "locked out" from 1 to 20 workers when they reported this morning and that 300 strikers staged a strike of their own at London Terrace, one of the city's largest apartment buildings, in protest against the management's alleged refusal to reinstate 20 of their number.

Agawam Decision Deferred by Court

Judge George C. Sweeney in the Federal District court today continued until March 30 the hearing of the petitioners for the reorganization of the Agawam Racing and Breeders' Association, Inc.

The continuance was granted after one of the petitioners announced that an attorney representing a number of stockholders was vacationing in Florida.

In announcing the continuance, Judge Sweeney said: "If the plans submitted on March 30 does not take care of all claims I will on that date consider turning the entire matter over to an auditor."

Indebtedness of the organization according to creditors claims now on file amount to more than $150,000.

The new plan to pay off creditors will be filed on or before March 30th.

HAGOOD SILENT ON OUSTER

Charleston, S. C., March 16 (INS)—"I have no intention of saying anything in regard to my personal affairs to the press."

In this statement, Major General Hagood, ousted as commander of the Eighth Corps Area for his out-spoken criticism of government spending, greeted reporters upon his arrival here.

The officer, who was ordered to Charleston to "await orders," was met at the station by his sister, Mrs. R. Dozier Lee, with whom he will stay here. He said he did not know how long he would be in Charleston.

General Hagood was accompanied by Major J. C. Minus, retired, of San Antonio, a former West Point classmate. Both were civilian clothes.

General Hagood said he would respond to a toast "to the State of South Carolina" at a St. Patrick's Day dinner of Charleston's century old Hibernian Society tomorrow night, but would not discuss current events.

G. E. Marchand

These are but a few of the many keys to advancement that will be demonstrated by G. E. Marchand, of New York, "America's Famous Maker of Successful Men and Women," Tonight at Tremont Temple.

As a direct result of applying Mr. Marchand's method, thousands have been able to break away from dull, routine jobs and attain unexpected success. Following are just a few excerpts from the many letters received from those who attend his program.

"More than doubled my earnings," says Frank H. Copeland. "Received three promotions with the Hudson Motor Car Co.," writes Wm. Lovett. "Now I am at the head of my own business. Success came from the start," says A. J. Thompson. "Increased my income from $4,800 to $7,000," telegraphs Irl R. Harris. "Last month I increased my pay check $97.32 over my previous month," writes J. E. Seitz. Letters like these are constantly pouring in.

If you are really ambitious, come Tonight. Mr. Marchand's programs may be worth thousands of dollars to you in the years to come.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

So far as one can gather from the public press, Friday, the thirteenth of March, was a riot of superstition all over the United States.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The best illustration of this fact which I have run across is the account of a dinner given by an organization in Chicago which calls itself the Anti-Superstition Society and which positively wallowed in a kind of superstition all its own.

The society numbered 13 men, all of whom had made a point of getting out of the wrong side of the bed that morning.

They chose a hotel room numbered 1313 for their banquet and sat down to dinner at precisely 6:16 o'clock. (That is, they planned to. I have never seen even a group of that size sit down to dinner at a foreordained minute.)

To reach their chairs they passed under a ladder of 13 rungs and painstakingly wrote their names on the wood by way of evidence. The chairman called his meeting to order by smashing a hand mirror with his gavel.

Indulge in Pet Anti-Superstitions

Subsequent activities depended on individual taste. The members indulged in various pet anti-superstitions. Some of them lit three cigarettes on a single match, opened umbrellas indoors, spilled salt without throwing it over the left shoulder, bragged without knocking on wood, broke up their bread into crumbs (which is supposed to be an invitation to poverty), crossed their knives and forks, always a death sign, and shook hands across the table to invite the Jinx.

The menu, we were told, was composed as follows:

Black Cat Cocktail
Canape a la Jinx
Consomme o' Friday
Entree of Evil Luck
Ladder Salad a Red Light
Coffin Ice and Coffee

This menu strikes me a pretty weak and feeble and conventional attempt at wit with reverse English, quite in keeping with the bathos of some of the other outworn and banal references. A little research into the literature of the subject in strange countries and past ages would have offered many more lively superstitions, of a character guaranteed really to make the flesh creep.

They might, for instance, had grace said in the fashion of the Lord's Prayer backward, always a pretty dreadful thing to do. And assuming that they drank Port after dessert, they might well have circulated the bottle "widdershins" or against the sun, counter-clockwise, which isn't healthy either.

Comic Superstition Of Rationalism

You will see, perhaps, why I call this, too, "superstition." So far as I am concerned it is worse superstition than the common, unthinking, habitual observance of old gestures. Nowadays such observances are usually comic in their intention. But this elaborate propaganda against something which no one takes seriously any longer contains without question fresh seeds of another and quite as absurd superstition. It might be called the superstition of rationalism.

Probably the writer who has best handled this whole business is Gilbert Keith Chesterton in his Father Brown stories—"The Wisdom of Father Brown," "The Innocence of Father Brown," and succeeding volumes.

Father Brown is the type of the Divine Detective, who is able to distinguish between the overt act and the soul's intention. He can distinguish the apparently guilty act with the blameless intention from the apparently harmless act with the evil intention.

In this case, I take it, Father Brown would recognise the definitely evil effect of an actual superstition, however cloaked under a pretense of rationalism.

These Chicago gentry are the kind of people ready to fall victims of the worst kind of "scientific" superstitions, such as those affected by dentists, physicians, biologists, psychiatrists, and their like. For there is superstition in science nowadays, as well as in earlier times.

Rationalism has by no means destroyed credulity. Merely the focus of credulity has changed.

CURLEY HITS G.O.P. ON BUDGET

Evacuation Day Fetes Opened

CURLEY LAUDS IRISH RECORD

South Boston was fairly embarked on its Evacuation Day observances following an enthusiastic inaugural banquet attended by 2000 persons in Municipal Building, East Broadway.

Tonight the annual "night before" dinner is to be held at the Hotel Touraine with the Rev. John F. X. Murphy, S. J., of Boston College as principal speaker.

Governor Curley as special speaker at the municipal building function was lavish in his praise of the part persons of Irish extraction have played in American history. He scored certain historians for efforts to obscure the real facts.

He extolled the exploits of Captain John Sullivan in capturing Fort Mary a year before the "shot heard 'round the world was fired."

Irish Soldiers

"At Concord and Lexington," he said, "a handful of Americans answered the call and 122 of them were Irish. The faith of Washington in the Irish was such that on Dorchester Heights on March 17, 1776, he made the watchword 'St. Patrick.' Only three million people were living in the 13 colonies when they took up arms against the greatest and most powerful nation in the world.

"Massachusetts in Puritan days made a criminal out of Roger Williams because he taught a doctrine of kindness and the Irish race was persecuted because they worshipped God as they were taught by the illustrious St. Patrick," the governor added.

He was joined in tribute to the Irish people by Governor Thomas F. Greene of Rhode Island, the principal speaker, Governor Greene confined most of his remarks to an historical summation of events leading up to and following the first Evacuation Day.

Contest Prizes

During a varied speaking, reading and musical program, prizes for the annual Evacuation Day essay contest were awarded. Winners included: Walter Clark, Walter F. Brazauskas and Edward Smith of South Boston high school, Helen M. McCarthy, Patricia M. Aahman and Anna R. Murphy of St. Augustine's high school. Other winners were: Helen Drake, Thomas O'Connor, Mary Fogarty, Russell Peterson, John Harvey and Claire Hunt.

Charges that politics were being allowed to seep into the celebration were made following a statement that Speaker Leverett Saltonstall of the House, a Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, had been invited to take part in the annual parade tomorrow.

Chief Marshal Thomas H. McDevitt declared that he did not invite him but that he would not discuss the matter until after the celebration had been completed.

Therapeutics Put Curley in Fettle

Governor Curley was back to work in fine fettle today after a brief visit to the New England Sanitarium where he was given a hydrotherapy treatment.

In 1934, just before his campaign for the gubernatorial post, Governor Curley was a patient at the Sanitarium for two weeks. Yesterday's visit was his first since assuming the office of chief executive of the Commonwealth.

The Governor is in good health, having just returned from a real trip to Florida and Havana, but he desired a few hours' relaxation in preparation for his St. Patrick's Day speech to be delivered in Scranton, Pa., tomorrow.

Taxpayers' Brief Stirs Governor

CHARGES HELD MERE POLITICS

Governor Curley today charged that a brief filed by the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers' Association on Beacon Hill, demanding a $13,000,000 slash in the state budget, "is just another political speech of the Republican party."

"There is abundant proof that the Republican machine is behind the attack on the budget," he declared. "The taxpayers' association is part of that machine."

The brief asserts that the $75,000,000 state budget contains many instances of padded payrolls and items of expense illegally contracted for. The proposal by the Governor for a $9,000,000 building bond issue is attacked and its entire elimination is called for by the association.

It further says that two million dollars be lopped off the general fund budget and two million more from the highway fund budget.

It is most emphatic in its demands that all wage increases be suspended for 1936 and in its condemnation of expenses of the executive department.

"It may be that only by providing a penalty can the Legislature be certain to end the practice of adding persons to the state employ and of increasing salaries in excess of legislative authority," says the brief.

"Contempt for Law"

"The many examples brought out before your committee of illegal employment and salary increases conspicuously in the executive, civil service and education departments, are indicative of an official contempt for law and complete breakdown of budget control, which, starting at the very top, had permeated the entire structure of government.

"There has been indisputable evidence of deliberate evasion, defiance and nullification of the power and authority of the general court," the brief continues.

The office of Lieutenant Governor Hurley came in for criticism with the charge that for 151 years the department functioned at no cost other than salaries but now estimated expenses for 1936 are $7100.

With reference to the highway fund the brief declares that business men are being spent with private companies for truck repair which could be done within the department and urges that the policy of requiring patented materials be supplied by road contractors be discontinued.

The brief also declares that salary expenses in Lieutenant Governor F. Hurley's department have increased 25 per cent [illegible] 1934 to 1935 and that Hurley's [illegible] 1936 is 94 per cent increase [illegible] over that of Governor Ely.

"Creates Evils"

In calling for an increase in the power of the state auditor and an immediate revision of the 48-hour law, the brief declares that the latter statute seems to have created more evils than it sought to cure.

In listing its proposed economies the taxpayers' association concludes:

"Even with these reductions the general fund budget would still remain by far the highest in the history of the state. It would be more than $1,000,000 larger than the 1935 budget and $5,000,000 larger than the average from 1931-1935."

The $13,000,000 cut suggested by the group coincides with that advocated by the ways and means committee in its opposition to the governor's $78,060,000 request.

FOR LADIES ONLY—Spring is such a litt[illegible] word to mean so much—don't you think? Now it is unmistakably on its way—for we have sniffed it in the air—and there's nothing we can do to ward it off. We can only turn our thoughts (not at all lightly) to ourselves and our looks and the state of our wardrobe. We can stare into wondrous shop windows, with one hand over a wild [illegible] healing heart and the other tightly clasping a pocketbook. We can read, in the fashion magazines, about "Paris Openings." We can make serious mental notes that skirts will be shorter, waists higher, shoulders broader, hats more shallow.

And here and there I have picked up some Springy little items for you. For instance—fashion decrees that, on your way to a party, you MUST stop at the florist for your hair ornament . . . and that you can look simply ducky with a yellow jonquil tucked behind one ear . . . I hear that a young woman recently appeared at a theater opening with an orchid, all purple and trembly, perched right on the top of her head . . . She created a sensation—as I should think she would.

Vivid nail polish, after having slipped a great deal in popularity, is making a triumphant comeback along with the season's pussy willows. Perhaps it's the Chinese influence.

Bright-colored ascot scarfs, although very smart with your spring outfit, simply mustn't be worn unless you have a perfect chin line. (You don't need to project a liability.)

Nearly everybody in the car watched him except his subject, who was absorbed in his newspaper.

When the silhouette was finished the artist got up and gave it to the man. He was pretty much astonished.

New England Police Stories

THE DIARY MURDERER OF LYNN

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Fantastic Notations Kept by Killer

This is the 41st in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Francis P. "Tip" O'Neill, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of "The Diary Killer of Lynn."

Other stories in the series will be written by reporters whose by-lines are equally familiar throughout New England.

By FRANCIS P. "TIP" O'NEILL

As yet undiscovered, the bullet-riddled body of an old man was lying, stark and still, on the Lynn marshlands, that April night.

The sightless eyes stared up at stars half veiled by scudding clouds—clouds driven by an icy wind which howled banshee-like across the tide flats.

Safely sheltered from that wind, if not from thoughts of what was concealed by the gale-blown marsh grass, a murderer was sitting at a writing desk in a Boston hotel room.

He was doing what no murderer should ever do.

He was making an entry in a diary.

First, he put the date down:

Then, in nervous, hasty pen scratches, he crawled page after page of semi-incoherent word.

"If I am wrong, God, hope I have better luck today."

"It Is Done"

"Better weather, anyhow. Breakfast. Go to L. (Breeon) street at eight o'clock. Wait. He comes out at eight-thirty. Laborer working in front. Old man don't leave house.

"Nine—and he don't leave. Nine-thirty—nothing doing. Ten—nothing doing. Twenty-thirty—nothing doing. Eleven—nothing doing.

"Eleven-thirty—he goes to church. Comes back at 12:45. Comes out to hose workman on job. Goes back into house.

"Neighbors wonder why I stick around. Trolley car company inspector bluff to doctor on corner works fine.

"One-thirty—don't come out. Two-thirty—nothing doing. Three-fifteen—he comes out and takes street car to Tailor's.

"Leaves tailor's at 4:15 and . . .

"Oh, God help me, dear, IT IS DONE!"

He turned two.

The flow of frantic words went on:

"Drive over in R. (Boston). So sick, dear, but so rested to know it is all over. It is the work of God, dear. It worked out just as I planned it. So many long months.

"I feel repaid already to know that I have done my whole, but God how I have suffered!

"It is not over yet, as that awful pain is still there in my head.

"It seems like something pressing on the base of my brain all the time, but maybe it will go away now.

"God help us both, and I do hope this will fix you, dear, where you had ought to be, and that it will fool those crooks attempts to rob you.

"God guide you and keep you from all harm. I pray so hard for you, dear.

In Flight

"I love you so much I can't tell it in words, BUT THIS WHICH I HAVE DONE IS SOME PROOF, ISN'T IT, DEAR?

"God keep me so that I can see you again. Goodby, darling, goodby!"

This wasn't all of the April 11 diary entry.

It was even longer. It has saved Lynn and Boston police a lot of trouble and time. It has been able to peer into the inner of the twitch-ridden brain of

Of course it wasn't put

Not until [illegible] 12, in fact, was the [illegible] marshlands discovered.

By that time, the multiplier was in full flight, express train wheels click-clicking away the miles between his guilty conscience and the scene of his crime.

Before nightfall of April 12, however, it was apparent that the Lynn marshland shooting was one which police must solve—or hand in their badges!

For the victim, identified almost at once by papers in his pockets was no less a personage than Lynn's recently retired "soap king" 77 year-old George E. Marsh, a respected millionaire and a power to the day of his death, in industrial enterprises all across the continent.

If Marsh could be lured from his home, shot down and left dead, like a nameless nobody, beside the highway, then who was safe? Lynn and Boston citizens were demanding heatedly.

There had to be action—and plenty of it—in investigating that homicide.

First officers assigned to the case were the late Stacey Burckes subsequently a captain, and William Murray, now one of the keenest man hunters on the Commonwealth's staff of state detectives.

Reaching the supposed crime scene, Burckes and Murray found the body undisturbed.

Money and other valuables were untouched in the dead man's pockets.

This didn't look like robbery.

Clothing Untorn

Yet the victim's gold-rimmed glasses were still in place, his top coat neatly buttoned, his other clothing unstained and untorn.

His derby hat, undented, lay [illegible]

"Couldn't have been much of a struggle," Billy Murray grunted.

"He was shot from the front. He must have seen the guy that did it. It was at close range, too."

"What's the answer?" it's easy! Marsh considered the murderer a friend—or at least a harmless business acquaintance. Marsh was caught off his guard."

It was obvious, from the first, that the body had been brought after the shooting to the spot where it was found.

This spot was a dozen or so yards from the Lynn boulevard and perhaps 500 yards from the West Lynn station of the Narrow Gauge railroad.

Marks in the soft earth indicated that the killer had dragged his victim under a fence which bordered the highway, then had half carried, half dragged the body into a patch of sea-grass.

"Must have had the dead man wrapped in something," deduced Officer Murray. "Otherwise there'd have been a lot of dirt on the clothes.

"Chances are the killing was done somewhere near here, too. If the murderer had dared carry the body very far in an automobile or a wagon, he'd have picked a better place than this to hide it. In either direction along the road there's plenty of deep water, plenty of ditches, plenty of culverts.

"This place was handy. That's why the killer used it. Let's see if we can find out on the highway."

It was apparently from a man's overcoat, but not from the victim's. In accordance with his character Georges E. Marsh's buttons had always been kept tightly sewed.

Hit 6 Times

When Marsh's body had been turned over to the medical examiner and an autopsy had been performed there was scientific confirmation of the theories originally formed by Murray and Burckes that bullets had struck the victim. Dr. Joseph G. Pinkham asserted. Two had pierced the heart. One had entered the head.

Marsh had been seated when the [illegible] were fired.

The killer had been close to him but had not apparently, laid hands on him. There were no bruises [illegible] strong hands or throat, as the [illegible] been had he been grasped and held powerless by [illegible]

Dr. Pinkham and what Officer Murray had said.

"Marsh was shot by somebody with whom he was acquainted, somebody against whom he was not on his guard."

According to the medical examiner, Marsh had been slain late in the afternoon or early in the evening of the day before the body was found.

He had been at his home on Ireson street, Lynn, all morning of the murder day, Thursday, April 11.

He had left the house only to [illegible] for a few moments the work of a laborer who was employed in the yard

Shortly before noon, Marsh had gone to the church of which he was a business officer, had conferred there with fellow members of his board.

He had returned home for dinner at 12:45.

Finally, at a little after 3:00 p. m., he had boarded a trolley car ostensibly to visit his tailors, the firm of Parker & Stone on Exchange street.

Yes, Marsh had been in, the tailoring firm proprietors recalled readily. He had tried on a new spring suit which was being made for him. He had appeared well and cheerful.

Scour of the town as they would, police could find no one who had seen Marsh alive after his visit to the tailor.

He had failed to keep an appointment with his brother, who was waiting to bowl him a match at the Y. M. C. A. alleys.

That the "soap king" should have been kidnaped in broad daylight in downtown Lynn was unthinkable.

He was not a man to have been lured to a questionable dive where he could have been killed without an alarm being given.

It seemed plain to Investigators Murray and Burckes that Marsh had accepted a lift from someone with a buggy or an automobile.

Mystery Man

Since he must have been shot to death not long afterwards and at a considerable distance, the automobile seemed the more likely vehicle to have been employed.

Of particular interest to police at this juncture of the case, was the story of Dr. Charles H. Bengengren, a physician living near the Marsh residence on Ireson street.

He told of seeing, on several successive days, a mysterious stranger sitting in a parked automobile. The stranger had appeared to be watching Marsh's home.

Questioned by Dr. Bengengren, the loitering autoist had said he was a trolley car company inspector working on a special assignment.

He had the stranger been in the neighborhood on the afternoon of Thursday, April 11? police wanted to know.

He had, said Dr. Bengengren, but he'd driven away about 3 o'clock or a little later.

The observant physician described the stranger's car, even gave the police the registration number

A state-wide search for the machine and its driver—was immediately ordered

According to Dr Bengengren, the wanted man was about 35 years old five feet, seven inches tall, dark of hair and complexion, smooth shaven, with fine wrinkles conspicuous at the corners of his [illegible]

That description was sent out.

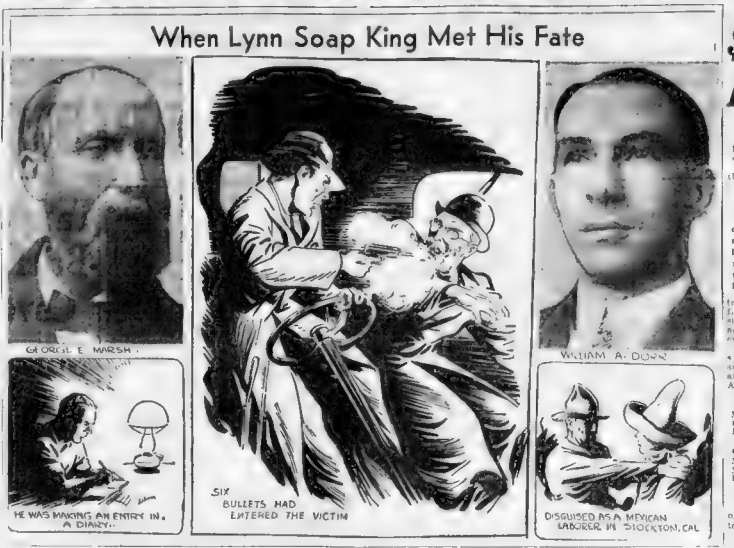
"Soap King" Marsh had been a widower. He had lived with a [illegible]

The latter told police that she believed her brother had been worried and disturbed by the presence in Lynn of a man from California.

There was some business matter at stake, she thought, but Marsh's affairs were mixed up in it, too.

Marsh, she said, had been trustee of an estate left to a step-niece living in Stockton, Cal

This step-niece's name was Orpha Marsh.



Now, Officers Murray and Burckes felt they were getting somewhere

They soon had the wires hot to Stockton, Cal., and they lost no time in questioning other relatives of "Soap King" Marsh in regard to his California affairs.

Orpha Marsh, they learned, was the adopted daughter of James Marsh, a deceased brother of the murdered George E. Marsh

James had gone West in the gold rush days of '49 and had piled up a modest fortune

By his will this estate, valued at $100,000 or more, was to be held in trust for Orpha Marsh until 1916 George E. Marsh of Lynn being administrator, empowered to pay Orpha Marsh a monthly income from interest accruing on her principal.

Orpha Marsh, it appeared, had not of late been too well satisfied with the handling of her money

She had wanted a larger income

She had asked a great many questions

Mixed In It

But Orpha Marsh was both elderly and ailing.

She hadn't come East and shot to death her "soap king" stepuncle

That was pretty obvious

But couldn't somebody else, either with or without Orpha Marsh's knowledge and consent, have acted for her—and acted ruthlessly?

As if in answer to their thought, back came a telegram from Stockton, Cal., police.

Orpha Marsh has nephew, William A. Dorr, 35. He has been missing since March 14. Height five feet seven. Smooth shaven. Complexion dark. Crows' feet at eye corners. Formerly lived with the aunt."

On Tuesday, April 18, five days after the "Soap King" Marsh murder, Lynn police had obtained a warrant charging William A. Dorr with the killing.

All across the continent, [illegible] were flashing the "Wanted" bulletin,

Rewards totalling $2500 had been offered for arrest and conviction of the slayer.

Of the $2500, the Boston Evening American had pledged $1000.

On April 17, Dorr was arrested in Stockton, Cal. He was disguised as a Mexican laborer and was, by his own admission, attempting to make his way, unobserved, to the home of his aunt.

Sewed to his underclothing was $2200, which he later proved to have been his own money.

His overcoat had all its buttons but one of them had been newly sewed on. It didn't match the rest

It was the diary, more than anything else, which eventually sent William A. Dorr to the electric chair at the Charlestown state prison.

It was a strange, fantastic document.

Much of its contents appeared obviously to have been written with intent to convey an impression of mental unbalance.

Other parts seemed to have been transcribed from original notes in another form

But, taken from start to finish the diary told a story which no jury could fail to interpret correctly.

Its story was one which was all the clearer, when supplemented by evidence brought forward by the prosecution to show that Dorr was the legal heir of his aged and ailing aunt.

According to government witnesses, Dorr had reason to suppose that the death of "Soap King" Marsh, the trustee, would at once convey to Orpha Marsh the whole principal of her original $100,000 inheritance.

Varied Moods

Dorr's bitterness over what he thought were attempts at sharp dealing on the part of "Soap King" Marsh and others was also emphasized in the diary.

Damningly explicit, too, were entries describing Dorr's long and patient vigils near Marsh's Ireson street home.

Corresponding perfectly with Marsh's known movements on April 11, the murder day, were the times recorded on that date by Dorr.

The latter had even noted, in his diary, the supposed success of his "trolley-car-company inspector" ile to Dr. Bengengren

Then had come the mention of Marsh's visit to the tailor shop Marsh's reappearance on the street . . .

And the words:

"Oh, God help me, dear, it is done!"

There was many another illuminating passage in the diary.

Among them, these:

"If I could only see my aunt and tell her all, I would be so happy. I was so happy at home with her and then to suffer such mental agony is certainly hell. But I shall not give up, as it is for her.

God bless her and protect her from all harm."

"I feel it not only my duty but the only pleasure I have to protect her (the aunt) against the sharks in whose clutches she is and can't move any way to protect herself. I am going to see her if it costs me my life and if it does cost me my life will die willingly, knowing it is for her."

"March 24. Arrived in Boston. A stranger in a strange land, but shall make the best of it as I am determined those crooks shall not deprive her of her whole life, she has waited all these years for this thing, and now she is getting old and needs it, and they won't even answer her letters."

Long Prayer

"March 31. This is Sunday morning and I am off early across the bay (to Lynn). Saw him today for the first time. He was coming home from church. I waited. He came out of the house, went to the beach for a walk.

"I go home and then down to the slums to hire a desperado. I find a Negro who will take the job for $100."

(The "Negro," by Dorr's later admission, was imaginary.)

"All is now regarded, dear, at last. So tired. To bed. Much to think about."

"April 1. Buy automobile for job. A second hand one, $350. Rains today—and that's bad."

"April 6. My heart is with you, dear, and if God spares me to accomplish my purpose and to see you again, oh, won't I be happy!"

"April 7. Rain again. He started down street, went back home. All chance lost. Terrible sore. Disgusted. Nearly gave up, but something keeps telling me to stay, it will be O. K. It is for her and for the best."

"April 8. Too cold. He wouldn't come out. Long prayer for you, dear, and good night."

"April 9. Decided again for him to come out. Supper at 6. Chicken. I haven't enjoyed a meal since I left home. I am getting desperate!"

"April 10. Not going to be in suspense much longer. Am going to get it over with. If this keeps up I will go crazy. Yet I must give up. This means so much to her.

"Went back there at 7. Waited till 8:15. He comes out. Walks around the block. Goes in. Too many people around. Can't do job on that account. Went to bed and had long prayer for you, dear."

Next entry in Dorr's diary was that of April 11 already quoted

Leaves Boston

That was the one which included the words, "Oh, God help me, dear, it is done!" and the later assertion, "I love you so much I can't tell it in words, but this which I have done is some proof, isn't it, dear?"

Concluding pages of the diary told of Dorr's departure by train from Boston, his need of "stronger stimulant" [illegible] continued headaches and days and nights of nightly prayer.

A letter found in Dorr's possession at the time of his arrest was addressed to his aunt, Orpha Marsh at Stockton, Cal. It was dated April 12, at New York

In part, it read:

"My darling: Uncle George died yesterday. Can't explain anything now—but am on my way to San Francisco.

"I cut most out lest a soul know of this letter or that you know your uncle is dead, but wait until you hear from some other source before mentioning

"Will write me, dearest.

"Burn this!"

Whether the letter was a copy or one which Dorr had neglected to mail, police were uncertain.

It didn't matter much, anyhow

By the time Dorr went on trial in Salem Superior Court, February 17, 1913, he had admitted killing Marsh

The murder gun, a 32-calibre automatic pistol, had been found in the Saugus river by a fisherman [illegible] the [illegible] car had been [illegible] in Boston

Dorr had put hand it, the receipt showed, and had registered it in the name of Willis A. Doe.

According to Dorr's story, told on the witness stand, he had not intended to kill Marsh, but had wished only to persuade him to see Orpha Marsh a more generous monthly allowance.

Dorr said he watched Marsh's home for so many days only to escape he need [illegible] opportunity to speak to the "Soap king" alone without knowledge of other members of the Marsh family in Lynn

On the day of the killing, Dorr said, he told Marsh he knew [illegible] left the tailor shop He asked Marsh to take a ride and discuss the California business

There was some argument, according to Dorr, and he attempted to leave the automobile after Marsh had made a remark "insulting" to Orpha Marsh

Climbing over Marsh to reach the car door, Dorr stumbled, he said. One of his hands, accidentally, struck Marsh in the face.

"Hit me, will you?" roared the "soap king"

"He took me by the throat," Dorr testified. "I couldn't break his grip. He was choking me to death. Everything was going black. I managed to reach into my hip pocket, where I had the gun.

Fired Upward

"All of a sudden I had the weapon out and was pulling the trigger. I don't know how many times I fired.

"I was on my knees on the floor of the car. I fired upward against Marsh's body, as he still clung to my throat.

"He fell back in the seat. When I recovered my senses, he was dead

"First, I started to drive to the Marsh home with the body. Then I decided I would go to the police.

"After going back and forth on the highway for two hours I became panic stricken.

"I pulled the body in an auto robe, pushed it under the fence by the roadside and dragged it into the grass. I took the car away with me. I threw it into the river."

At great length, Dorr described alleged financial [illegible] of which his aunt had been the victim, he said.

He had come East, he insisted only to "get her her rights" She hadn't known of his trip

In rebuttal, the state offered expert medical testimony [illegible] that the wound in Marsh's and body could only have fired from a gun held above t

Each of the bullets had to downward course

As evidence of Dorr's murder intent, the state had only to offer [illegible] and Interpreting diary

The jury was out a scant two hours

Only one ballot was taken

"Guilty of murder in the first degree," was the verdict.

To the electric chair, on the morning of March 24, 1914, Dorr marched smilingly.

His last words were

"Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit."

In his diary he had written:

"If it does cost me my life, I will die willingly."

"Soap King" Marsh hadn't had that consolation!

Tomorrow in the Boston Evening American the true detective series will continue with "The Black Hand Murders," by Frank C. McLean.

Barrymore in New Radio Setting

By N. F. T.

Those who read here on Saturday about Lionel Barrymore being with Al Jolson as a guest artist that night, didn't know that the same Mr. Barrymore was a missing ready to resume regular radio duties No more did I know it, when he starts taking weekly part in the Sigmund Romberg studio party (WEEI) broadcasts each Monday night. First of the series due to Barrymore is this evening at 9:30 p. m.

"N. F. T."

Character work is one of course where Lionel Barrymore shines and it is the type of role he will assume Cora Sue Collins, gifted child actress, is to provide support. It all started when Sigmund Romberg heard the recited actor reading "Little Boy Blue" to the talented young Miss Collins. It was decided upon to have him answer various queries on all topics and the idea seems as though it cannot fail to click far and wide with the air audience.

POPULAR PAIR

Artists above par and big assets to the Ted Fio Rito orchestra, now playing for Hub dance enthusiasts at the well known Levagni Flamingo Room, are "Candy" Candido and Stanley Hickman. Both boys are specialists and well remembered for their snappy performances in the films. They helped make "Broadway Gondolier" and "Roberta" which those pictures were and are accordingly attracting crowds to see them and in putting over the Ted Fio Rito special arrangements. . . .

An address by Secretary of the Interior Ickes on "Democracy Embattled in a Changing World" before a banquet of the United Synagogues of America in Washington tonight, will be broadcast (WEZ) from 10:30 to 11:00 p. m.

The broadcast will conclude the three-day meeting of the organization, held every two years to consider problems relating to the social and spiritual welfare of Jews in America.

WANTED FOR WORTH

Scripts of the current "Forever Young" programs, after they have been used on the air, are being requested by amateur groups throughout the country for local offerings. As far as can be ascertained this is the first time such a request has been made for material.

AUSTEN LAKE

Quinn Looks Back

Over His Shoulder

ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., March 16—From his perch on the backslopes of the grandstand, Bob Quinn cupped his chin in the hollow of a hand and let his eyes dream over the scene below.

AUSTEN LAKE

Forty athletes, in the dingy regimentals of the Bees, toiled briskly in the sun, filling the air with popcorn spats as a dozen baseballs passed from hickory bat to leather mitt.

In a faraway angle of the field, a plump probationer was throwing practice pitches to a camp-lounger in a denim jumper, heaving the ball with the cramped, freshman crudities of one who has no gifts for the game.

Quinn brooded on the youth, a perplexed pucker between his eyes and making little clucking sounds in his throat.

"Darrell Berger," he said softly, as though savoring the sound of the name, "It's a long way back."

At the moment Bob was not thinking in terms of miles, though he knew, inevitably, that the plump lad would draw little for his training pains but a pullman seat back to Ohio.

Bob was letting his mind drift back through the corridor of the years to the July day of 1903, when he, as overseer of the Columbus, O., club, was fanning the bushes for likely looking youngsters.

Berger, Sr., Walter Johnson in Power

HE HAD DRIFTED INTO the corn country of lower Ohio to a whistle-stop village named Pickway, where, between trains, he stopped to watch two teams of country boys play in a cow pasture

"There was a big, raw-boned pitcher . . ." said Bob, pausing to study the distant figure of the plump youth and tapping his teeth reflectively with his forefinger. ". . . and he blinded those yokel hitters with plain elbow speed. No curves. Just pick-and-shovel power."

Bob had signed the rustic youth to a printed contract form, given him train fare, and gone home to Columbus. But for three weeks nothing happened, while Quinn sent wires and letters, pleading, bullying and wheedling. Until one day his farm boy appeared in Columbus

"He wore a mail order suit and a fiddler's haircut . . ." said Quinn, watching the plump boy's awkward antics, ". . . and he carried a pasteboard suitcase with a bat strapped to its side."

And in that 33-year-old day the yokel youth had eyed Bob suspiciously, remarking that he wouldn't have come if he'd known the distance was so far, and that the folks back home said he'd have to walk back. So that Quinn had peeled off the equivalent of his return fare and offered it as a token of sincerity.

Berger, Sr., Tutors Son in Diamond Arts

THE PLUMP LAD WAS jogging around the outfield fences now, lumbering with an awkward lope that indicated green bones and hitting on his heels

"He was a grand pitcher," resumed Quinn, a caress in his voice, "and he began blowing the batters down in Columbus like he was still pitching in his hayfield."

Bob droned on, how the rustic had gradually added polish, store clothes, lobby manners, and a shrewd money sense, though never losing his quaint Dutch accent. And how he went to the major leagues and stayed until at length athletic autumn had arrived and retired him to his farm.

"His name was Charley Berger . . ." said Quinn, peering after the fat probationer's clumsy gallop. ". . . We called him Heinie, and that boy is his son."

And briefly philosophical, Bob said that fathers were always the same, nearsighted toward filial failings, and telling how, lately, old Heinie had written to say that he had taught the boy all he knew about the pitching arts in barn-yard lessons.

Breaking the News to Father

THERE HAD BEEN A STRANGE touch of melancholy in that letter, in which Old Heinie had, in his scrawly penmanship, written that since Bob had launched him in the elder time, now he wanted Bob to have his son for the sake of mutual benefits

"He's got more than I had when you found me," wrote Old Heinie.

The plump kid was shagging outfield flies now, groping vaguely like one who fumbles in the dark for the kitchen light His knees had an odd way of bumping, and the elastic of one pantleg had broken

Obviously, fun had long ceased, and, though the distance was too far for our eyes, we knew that rivulets of moisture were trickling off his nose, that he had blisters on his feet and that he wished it was dinner time.

And from the tone, as one might recite a line of verse, I knew he was wondering how he could tell old Heinie tactfully, and whether, maybe, it wouldn't be kinder to carry the plump kid North for the temporary sake of coloring the old man's dream He might even ask McKechnie to let the lad get his name in box score print.

It was past noon now, and the toilers were drifting toward the shower room. Darrell Berger clumped by, a happy shine in his eye, thoughts of dinner time in his mind.

"Let's go," said Quinn, uncupping his chin and stretching the starch from his spine.

Sunshine City Irks Quinn; B's May Go Elsewhere

Taped-Ball Layout

FIELD MUDDY WITH SUN SHINING

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16—Bob Quinn, Bees' prexy, was a-setting down today to have a heart to heart talk with the powers-that-be here in the Sunshine city.

First of all he would like to know how come St. Pete is called the Sunshine city, when all it has done since he came here is rain

Of course, Bobby, being a fair man, doesn't blame those same powers that be for the rain

But he does think they are to blame that Waterfront Park, the Bees' training grounds, is not fit place for such expensive pieces of bric-a-brac as major league ball player.

He hasn't gone to the extent of saying that he will withdraw the Bees from St. Pete in favor of some other spring training site But there seems to be something very nearly as drastic smoldering in his mind

BARBED WIRE

It is safe to wager that he will present some sort of ultimatum today, and it is likely he didn't do it yesterday when it was necessary to cancel the second Bees-Yankees' game because of wet grounds though the day proved to be the best in two weeks, with the sun beaming brightly from early morn until late afternoon when storm clouds gathered on the horizon

"I didn't say anything," declared Quinn, "because I couldn't talk I was too angry to talk. But I'll talk today And what I'll tell them will be plenty"

Quinn hasn't expressed any particular liking for St Pete ever since he came South as the head of the Bees though the Sunshine City is recognized as an ideal training spot

Perhaps the rain has had something to do with it though that has been most unusual

But more the city officials have failed miserably to carry out their promises to condition Waterfront Park

TIGERS TODAY

Quinn and Secretary Duffy Lewis stood outside peering anxiously at the skies and the rolling storm clouds

"If so much as a drop of rain falls," said Quinn, "we might just as well call the game now, because the infield will be under-water

"We should never had to cancel the Yankees' game. The weather was good. But it was due to pure negligence.

"Even after the sun had been shining several hours there were inches of mud on the surface of the infield

"Nobody takes care of the field. But somebody had better"

Just in case they were able to play the world champion Detroit Tigers today Manager McKechnie planned to start the same lineup which was scheduled to oppose the Yankees on Saturday and again on Sunday

The three pitchers will be big Jim Chaplin Hobart Scott and Bobby Reis The batting order—Meyers 3b Urbanski ss, Moore, rf Berger cf Cuccinello, 2b Lee, lf Fletcher 1b Lewis Mueller c.

The Detroit lineup which won its third game yesterday is Rogell, ss Fox rf Gehringer 2b, Simmons lf Walker cf York 1b, [illegible] 3b Hayworth, c

Buzzes West

Johnny Quinn, secretary of the Bees, is on his way to Dayton, O., and will not return until Wednesday

Before departing for the mid-West, Secretary Quinn refused to divulge the reason for his sudden trip but he may have some statement to release upon his return home.

REGULAR HURLERS WILL BREEZE HOME, SLUGGER PREDICTS

If I were to answer myself, I'd be asking Boss Jack Conway for a raise.

Remember I promised after Saturday's game with the Senators that we'd show vast improvement against the Reds in Tampa

Well, while we failed again to win we certainly showed improvement

JIMMY FOX

In one inning of the game we banged out as many hits as we collected in nine innings the day before And we flashed the power we think is going to carry us to the pennant against Paul Derringer, ace of a staff that's been in training five weeks

I'd remind you also of another prediction I made. When we started training I said we'd have an attack which would fashion between five and six runs per game

Figure it for yourself Eleven runs in our first two games. It appears though, as if I might have been a bit conservative in estimating our offensive strength. We were absolute strangers to [illegible] pitching before starting our Grapefruit League campaign and we're still well below our normal batting strength

AHEARN SMITH'S Successful Fight Deserves Puff

By Bob Ahearn

Lou Smith's successful fight to regain control at Rockingham is worthy of praise.

Smith was the pioneer of legalized pari-mutuels in these parts and it is only right that he should receive a fair shake of the gravy in the setup now in the making to encourage the sport of kings. Both Lou and Eddie Wrack, the latter a former Boston sports writer and all-around newspaperman, have been on the receiving end of a lot of unjust criticism since they started the ball rolling.

Lou Smith

There are fish and lobsters among horses as well as humans. It looks as if curves will be the fashion for fillies this season. At least that's the trend expressed by the racemares quartered at Charlie Phelan's Hickory Tree Farm, Georgetown, Mass. Phelan, local broadcasting chain executive, has slipped three of his string, Imp, Greenock, Be Just and Eddie Wrack, to Bowie, to prepare for the opening of the Eastern season April 1. . . . .

Racing Secretary Pat Horgan is a busy man these days, preparing for the opening of the turf season at Narragansett, May 5. Horgan has begun the onerous task of allotting stall accommodations to the hundreds of horses who plan to race there this year in New England this year. . . . .

Suffolk Downs' July 4 feature, the Yankee Stakes, for an added purse of $15,000, is now tied in at first the leading three-year-olds of the year, General Manager Sam Wilson was assured by Joseph E. Widener that he will enter Broadcast Florida Derby winner, in the local classic. Chance Shot, Kayak II offspring contending to train well. Another expected to contest the Yankee Stakes is Mrs. Silas Mason's He Did, winner of the Santa Anita $25,000 Derby . . . .

Ten American thoroughbreds have raced a mile and a quarter in 2 02 or faster. The official world record of two minutes flat, often disputed, was established by Whisk broom II. Unofficial American record is held by Sarazen, which ran the distance in 2 00 4/5 . . . Webb Everett has signed a new five-year contract as Santa Anita's racing secretary . . . .

Mary and Eleanor Powers, niece and daughter, respectively, of that grand old horseman, Tom Powers, now in charge of Sumner Fingree's Flying Horse Farm at South Hamilton, Mass., have asked accommodations for seven horses at both Narragansett and Suffolk Downs meetings . . . Billy Ames, Narragansett publicity pryer, is sending out reams of copy telling of the plans for Gansett's spring session. Ames is just about tops when it comes to publicity.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 16—Shandon Farm's Minton, partial to the local racing oval, shapes up as the safest hazard of the eight-race program of sport this afternoon.

SOX WILL WIN, CORUM PROPHESIES

TIGERS DUE FOR LETDOWN

By Bill Corum

New York, March 16—Inspirational writers and talkers are forever telling us that money won't buy happiness. And they may be as correct as a gent in striped pants and a cutaway coat at a wedding.

There definitely are some things, however, that money won't buy, and one of them is a pennant winning baseball team.

That sounds absurd, but isn't. You'd think that an owner who bought enough Gehrigs and Deans and Ruths and Cobbs would have nothing to worry over, save getting to the park in time to see his team win.

It doesn't work out that way. My good friend, Tom Yawkey, the multi-millionaire lumberman, who has been trying the noble experiment in Boston these past few seasons, could tell you that.

SPIRIT DOES IT

Spirit wins more sports contests than physical prowess, and, while it is possible to buy a ball player's body, there is nothing in the bill of sale that says his soul goes with it.

There is no doubt in this writer's mind, at least, that Boston now has a strong enough ball team if the component parts can be moulded into a team.

For, long, even the law of averages (the City of Boston hasn't boasted a pennant since 1918) will be going for the Yawkey-Collins-Cronin combination this season.

I agree with Joe McCarthy that Detroit doesn't look powerful enough to overcome the three-pennant-in-a-row jinx.

Only the truly great teams of the game have crashed through three times running, and if these Tigers are a truly great team, I've been going to ball games for 20 years for nothing.

In other words, they don't look it to me, and never have. On the contrary, they strike me as an inspired team that has played over its head for two seasons.

The Cleveland Indians have been slightly strengthened perhaps. Chiefly by the appointment of Steve O'Neil, who may prove a winning manager, to succeed that fine man, Walter Johnson, who never was one.

Your Yankees are almost certain to be stronger. Possibly strong enough to spank Yawkey a million dollar babies.

It wouldn't be in the cards for McCarthy's outfit to have the bad luck it did last year, either. However, if they don't do it I doubt any team in the Harridg [illegible] Beat the Red Sox, that is.

For while I don't believe that money will, as a rule, buy a pennant winning ball team, I have a hunch that the current Red Sox will prove the exception that proves the rule.

Worcester Poly Has Green Nine

By Will Connell

Worcester, March 16—A coaches' paradise seemed Worcester Polytech to the college sports teachers who read of the Institute's 35 "athletic scholarships" a year ago.

From the Heart of the Commonwealth pulsed a red-hot tale about this little school of the sciences where the 30-odd youngsters would be welcomed each Autumn, with strong backs and durable legs the tokens of eligibility.

Ivan Bigler, veteran head coach at Polytech, now would be entering a golden age of conquest and fame—but for a minor error—the yarn was spun awry.

Truth was, and is, just this: Polytech for years had 35 scholarships, awarded each year after competitive examination. Desiring to make the awards on a broader basis, with character and personality rated, the old examination system was dropped.

Sharkey Plans Mid-April Fight

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of news: Allan Wilson tells me he has already made reservations for 1803 thoroughbreds at Suffolk Downs for the summer meeting that opens on June 13 and closes on August 14. This is almost twice as many horses as were at the East Boston track during its summer meeting in 1935.

* * *

We're sure horsemen will welcome with open arms upon a long meeting. It reduces their shipping expenses and gives them a better opportunity to win purses.

Wilson will be in with Willie O'Hara at Providence in May. Wilson and O'Hara are both anxious to improve records, particularly in New England, and should put on good performances.

Stuff in Boxing and Narragansett are in print about racing dates, but later may be induced to make some changes so as to give Rockingham Park more days of racing.

Wilson will also discuss the electric eye with O'Hara. The latter has already made arrangements to use the electric eye at Narragansett Park.

Racing progress makes it necessary for tracks to use the most modern kind of equipment. The electric eye eliminates the doubt there is surrounding close finishes.

Mr. Boston

O'MAHONY

I WAS much impressed by the remarkable improvement in straight away wrestling that Dan O'Mahony displayed in his winning bout with Nick Lutze.

In Lutze the Irishman was opposed by a wrestler who knows every hold in the game. Nick, however, found O'Mahony his equal in wrestling and a bit stronger in his scissors drive.

I met Lutze Saturday, and his right wrist and hand were bandaged as a result of the injury he received when his wild right hand haymaker went wild and hit the top ring rope. Nick felt that if it had not been for this mishap, he would have defeated Danno.

O'Mahony has started another tour which will take him as far as the Northwest. A part of his traveling program calls for him to hop by plane from Chicago at Spokane, Washington. The time of this hop is 11 hours.

* * *

Wrestlers are all air minded. They use the airways as they rush around the country keeping mat engagements.

Quinn stated the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission will recognize Robert as champion as a result of ... victory over Dean Detton in the final bout of the Philadelphia heavyweight tournament.

Andy Martin of the South End postcards he will oppose Freddy Miller, world featherweight champion, in a ten-round bout at Birmingham, Ala., on Friday night.

Martin defeated Jim McNamara of New York last week at Miami, Fla. Since going South, Martin has won seven out of eight matches.

HANS STEINKE

DON'T overlook Hans Steinke, German Oak, in rating the greats of wrestling. Alex MacLean made a smart move when he signed Steinke for a bout with Henry Piers at the Arena on Wednesday night.

It should be a hard, rugged tussle. Piers has enough wrestling class to make Steinke travel at top speed to avoid defeat.

I met "Gentleman" Jack Washburn at Buckley's Gym. Washburn has taken off considerable weight, and says he is prepared to meet the first flight heavyweights. He will appear on the Arena card Wednesday night.

Sharkey found out in his bout with Tony Shucco that his legs are even better than they were five years ago. He should show to better advantage in his next start.

Pin Entries To Close Saturday

By Walter Kiley

Five more days to go.

Bowling entries close Saturday.

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield of Boston today joins the list of donors of trophies for the great candlepin tournament March 30-April 11, being sponsored by the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

"I am only too glad to be able to further the interest of this genuine sports event," Mayor Mansfield writes.

"I feel that the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser accomplish a great deal in promoting such competition. Bowling and other kindred sports provide an excellent outlet for our people, keeping them on a normal, sane plane and making for contentment.

"Please accept my trophy in the spirit in which it is offered. I hope the tourney proves a grand success."

Thus the "Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield Trophy" is added to the fast growing lists of awards.

Simultaneous with the receipt of His Honor's gift comes the entry of the Boston City Hall team, which has hopes high of capturing top honors in the team division.

Other entrants are coming in with a rush, eager to get the choicest bowling times.

Olive Chase and Harry Bent of Waltham are paired in the mixed doubles. Margaret Oakes is bowling in the singles and is teaming with Jean Corbett in the doubles. The third representative of the Cedar Grove Alleys, Dorchester, Katherine Healey, is entered in the singles.

The Navy Yard is sending along a couple of oldtimers in C. E. Melin of Malden, and G. E. Brennan of Dorchester, who will pair in the doubles.

Newburyport has Mildred Roche, Mary and Anna Brooks.

The Lexington Inter-Club League loses to Garland N. Jones, James Meade and Gertrude Hutchinson to uphold its prestige.

FROZEN FACTS

Lester Patrick Grade-A as Seer

Cubs in Danger Of Elimination

By BILL GRIMES

On his last visit to the Garden, Lester Patrick declared he had a feeling that the battle for the third play-off berth in the American Division would continue until the final meeting between the Rangers and Bruins, which winds up the 1935-36 season.

Bill Grimes

Apparently, Lester knows the answers. For three weeks now, the Bruins and Rangers have been staging a nip and tuck race for the odd play-off position, and it's safe to predict they will fight it out for another week.

The Bruins, by virtue of the 1-0 victory over the Hawks, retained their one point lead over Rangers, who beat Americans 2 to 1, but the Hubites have a game "in hand."

Rangers are scheduled to meet the Blackhawks in New York tomorrow night, while the Bruins are playing Les Canadiens here at the Garden.

With an opportunity to move into a first place tie with Red Wings, who have lost six and tied one in seven starts, the Hawks hope to stop the Rangers.

The Bruins should take the measure of Sylvio Mantha's Frenchmen, but they have a tough assignment confronting them Thursday when they tackle Maple Leafs in Toronto.

The Leafs are back in second place and are listed to play Maroons tomorrow night in Montreal.

If the Bruins get by Les Canadiens and grab a tie in Toronto, they would qualify for the play-offs, regardless of the outcome of next Sunday night's game at the Garden, for Rangers have played twelve tie games against the Bruins' five.

Cubs Two Points Out of Third With Only Two Games to Play

Little Teddy Graham, who was the hero of the Sabbath game at the Garden, which he won with a sensational solo goal in the second period, must be unusually appreciative.

Just before the game he was the recipient of a beautiful bouquet of roses, which, unfortunately for his peace of mind, were delivered to the dressing room. There was a note enclosed but, of course, Teddy refused to divulge the name of the sender.

After taking a terrible riding from his teammates, Teddy went out and kept the Bruins' hopes alive by scoring the only goal of the game, which, aside also was one of the prettiest of the season.

Final Trials Tonight For N. E.'s

By Murray Kramer

Forty-odd mitt wielders of all descriptions gather at the Arena tonight to throw punches under the auspices of the Irish-American A.A. in the fourth and final elimination series for the New England boxing championships.

During the past month there have been three trial nights. The eight winners on each of these evenings automatically qualified for the finals. Tonight is the last chance for the ambitious glove throwers.

Jimmy Esposito

There are twenty-four now eligible for the sectional title, and eight more tonight make thirty-two. This group, together with selected representatives from Rhode Island and New Hampshire, will go to the next Monday night.

Out of the myriad amateurs in the ranks there is one young fighter who may come through with a surprise or two. He is Jimmy Esposito of Brookline.

Jimmy made his debut last month in the novice 135 class and showed great promise. He hit well and boxed well except for the fact that he occasionally forgot himself, threw instructions to the winds and started to punch away.

Jimmy is stepping in with veteran campaigners tonight in an attempt to get into the New England. It will be a good trick if he does it, but he has a lot of stuff.

'Cigar' Connors to Marry

And John, who always does everything with a touch of the "different," chose Friday the 13th to file marriage intentions to wed Miss Jennie May Green of Lawrence street, Back Bay.

What's more, in collaboration with the prospective bride, "Cigars" has picked Friday, November 13, for the marriage.

Just as the irrepressible Mr. Connors has defied the age-old theory that athletes should not smoke, so does he scoff at the timeless superstition concerning the number 13.

In fact, he swears by the mystical number. So does the little woman.

They met on the 13th. It was September of 1934. Johnnie was run ... in a race at a Scotch picnic at Caledonia Grove.

And of course he was puffing away at his cigar. That is what attracted the Miss Green.

Any man that could raise that much smoke, as well as dust, must be worthy, he thought Miss Green.

An interest in cigars followed.

Johnnie, in case you're not up in your data, is the World's Champion Cigar Smoker and as such, appeared in Bob Ripley's Believe It Or Not show.

... that time, he smoked a mere 250 weeds a day. Now, he has reduced his diet to a pitiful 28 cigars a day.

"Cigars" he has been smoking since he was 13. Thirteen, where did that bob up? And despite that, he's been running in marathons for 15 last 26 years.

He coaches track at the Norfolk Young Men's Association in Roxbury. And his advice to the boys is: Of all things, gue- ... Don't smoke."

A Trip on Jinx Ship

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Step up and meet JOHN STANG, ex-seaman, first class, U. S. Navy, now living at 6 Dartmouth street, Boston. It isn't hard for a gob to have an adventure—even in peace time, in the year 1924. And it was on January 16th of that year that Jack Stang ran into the tragic experience that nets him ten berries and the rating of Distinguished Member of the Adventurers Club.

FLOYD GIBBONS

It was on the U. S. S. Tacoma that Jack had his adventure. For years the Tacoma had been known as the "jinx ship." Well sir, the Tacoma stayed in character right to the end. The jinx never left it. It wound up its career in one last big splurge of hard luck, and when it went, it came doggone near taking Jack along with it.

It was during one of Mexico's million or so revolutions, and the Tacoma had been ordered to Vera Cruz to protect American lives and property. She steamed southward, and at three fifty a. m. on January 16th, the lookout reported the lights of Vera Cruz harbor. The lookout was none other than Jack himself. He'll never forget how those lights looked then—because of what happened almost immediately afterward.

Jack's watch was from 12 to four. That's known as the death watch in the navy. It was the death watch for the old Tacoma—and the last hours of seaworthy life for a misfortune-haunted ship. At four o'clock, Jack was relieved and went below. He turned into his bunk, and corked off. It didn't seem that more than two minutes had elapsed when he was thrown to the side of his bunk by a vicious jarring. Then bells began to ring. A siren bellowed SIGNALS! ABANDON SHIP!

"There was no sense in rushing," says Jack, "and no use getting excited. The Tacoma had grounded and settled on some sharp rocks which had pierced the hull and entered the engine room. The weather was too rough to launch a boat on those reefs, and we had to stay aboard all that night and all the next day, until, late in the afternoon small boats were able to come alongside and take the crew off."

Some of the crew, but not all of them. A rebel army of Mexicans were in control of Vera Cruz just then, and if the ship were abandoned, those birds would be aboard in no time, to take off the guns and ammunition. So a guard of 20 men and the Captain stayed on to stand guard. And Jack Stang was one of the 20 seamen who volunteered to do the job.

The rest of the crew were taken aboard the U. S. S. Richmond, and the Richmond steamed out of the harbor headed for Tampico, leaving behind 20 men to fight the elements and the Mexican rebel army.

That was just the start of things. The Richmond had hardly disappeared from sight when the weather began to get rough again. And that night was the worst nightmare Jack ever experienced in his life. By midnight, the worst blow in years was lashing the reef on which the Tacoma lay. Literally, it was tearing the doomed battleship to shreds.

The crew, to a man, was on deck. It wasn't safe to stay below.. The wind was rising, and every succeeding wave that washed over the stricken ship was larger than the last.

"It was one of the most terrible scenes I ever witnessed," Jack says. "The radio house was torn from the deck as I watched it, and hurled bodily over the side. Three men were in it when it went. One of them got out. The other two were never heard from again."

That wave had no more than passed when another was on them.

It caught Jack Stang in the pit of the stomach and that blow came near being the end of Jack.

With terrifying force he was hurled to the rail. The water, coming along behind, washed him over it.

AND THERE HE HUNG, BY ONE ARM, TO THE SIDE OF THE SHIP, STRUGGLING IN VAIN AGAINST AN ALMOST CONTINUOUS FLOW OF WATER, TO GET BACK ON DECK.

It was the Captain who saved Jack's life—but he SACRIFICED HIS OWN LIFE DOING IT.

Seeing Jack's plight he dashed to the rail, grabbed Jack's arms, and, bracing himself against the bulwark, hauled him back to the deck. But as Jack fell panting in the safe side of the rail, another huge wave was sweeping across the deck. It tore loose a heavy range finder, picked it up as if it were a matchbox and threw it on the Captain.

The crew jumped in. "We got the range finder off," says Jack, "but I'll never be able to put in words the sight that met my eyes beneath. The Captain, who, a second before was pulling me back to safety, was nothing but a mashed up mass of blood and flesh. I turned away, sick all over. It was only then that I realized that my leg was broken. And what happened after that I don't know, because, for the next 40 hours, I lay in a daze, barely aware that I was alive."

"That's the end of my story," Jack says, "and I hope I NEVER speak of it again."

I know how you feel about it, Jack—and thanks for picking me to be the one fellow you DID tell it to.

HOLLAND BALLET Has Important Part in New Shows

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Ballet is becoming a subject of muc[illegible] lively arts.

Ballet [illegible] is impo[illegible] impending [illegible] scene, and Dwight Deere Wiman's new musical show, "On Your Toes," should benefit by the interest more than the producer [illegible]pated when, several weeks ago, he chose Boston's Shubert Theater as the auditorium for the world premiere next Saturday night.

George Holland

"On Your Toes" is a satire, an "amiable satire on the [illegible]." Crowding this new musicals opening are the engagements of the "Folies Comiques de Paris," which comes to Boston Thursday; the "Hollywood Ballet," new to the East which opens Friday at the Boston Opera House, and a week from today, the Metropolitan Opera [illegible] will be with us again and featuring the Americ[illegible].

We may dismiss the 'Folies Comiques de Paris" with a sentence. It w[illegible] audiences and it will present a "ballet of 30 Parisienne demoiselles." In other words, ooh, la, la.

Mr. Wiman's "On Your Toes" has an engaging plot idea concerning the persuasions of an American [illegible] upon the artistic [illegible] Russian ballet [illegible] proposition [illegible] Broadway's Tin Pan Alley [illegible]mitted to write [illegible] new ballet. It w[illegible] amusingly, it [illegible]eported.

Uniquely enough we [illegible] name George Balanchine prominent in the program-credits of both "On Your Toes," a musical comedy designed for popular consumption, and of the Metro[illegible]tan Opera Company.

M. Balanchine [illegible] dancing number of On Your Toes. He is als[illegible] the "American B[illegible]" appear in four [illegible] hauser 'Aida [illegible]' "Carmen" in the [illegible] Metropolitan season.

M. Wa[illegible] was the engagement of Balanchine as maitre de ballet.

It was a happy action, both for Mr. Kirstein and the ballet-master. The Balanchine name has become more and more important. Los Angeles, March 16—You could look the town over and you wouldn't find anyone better suited to play the lead in "His Majesty, Bunker Dean" than Henry Fonda. That's how Sam Briskin felt and so he borrowed young Fonda from Walter Wanger.

I remem[illegible] in this [illegible] than I'd care [illegible] with a few little modern touches, it ought to be as good toda[y] as it was 15 or more years ago. William Sistrom has been appointed [illegible] to supervise while Edward Killy and William Hamilton are direct[illegible]

Robert Taylor, skyrocketing to fame, hits a new high in playing the male lead in "The Gorgeous Hussy," Joan Crawford's next [illegible]. There is so much work to be done on "Parnell" before [illegible] Stahl can start it, that Gorgeous Hussy goes into production April [illegible] with the dashing Mr. Taylor as Beau Timberlake. John Barrymore, who is now apparently set on the MGM lot, is also being tested for an important role.

Jimmy Dunn has been signed for [illegible] "The Gi[illegible] Parade," a Civil War story which deals with the Ma[illegible] and the Merrimac. With Jimmy will be Mae Clark, Charlotte Henry, and David M[illegible]. David returns to the screen after a retirement of over a year which he spent on his ranch. Another interesting item is that Lew Ayers will direct. This is Lew's first di[rectorial] effort for Republic.

[illegible] Jean H[illegible] divorce from Hal Rosson became final Friday, March 13. [illegible] the [illegible] until March 14. Not be[illegible] superstitious but [illegible] the 13th has an ominous sound. Naturally everyone is asking Jean's matrimonial plans, now that she is legally free, but her answer is she isn't contemplating marrying anyone at the moment. But we reply a lady can always change her mind.

Earle Stanley Gardner must [illegible] detective thrillers while he sleeps, he seems to turn out so many. Warner Brothers have just acquired a new one, "The Case of the Velvet Claw," and you'd be surprised how the exhibitors clamor for these melodramas. Warren William who has already made three of the stories, again plays Perry Mason the detective and in [illegible] Claire Dodd is featured along with him.

Music Notes

By RUTH MARSTERS

Arturo Toscanini's conducting of the New York Philharmonic Symphony Society in the two concerts to be given in Symphony Hall this evening and tomorrow afternoon have aroused keen anticipation.

The celebrated Italian conductor's present visit to Boston achieves an increased importance owing to the fact that it is, in all probability, his last, as he is now completing his final season in America as conductor of the New York orchestra.

The program of this evening's concert opens with Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz" and includes Beethoven's Seventh Symphony in A major, Brahms Variations on a Theme by Haydn, Smetana's Symphonic Poem "Vltava" and Wagner's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman."

Tomorrow afternoon's program includes Rossini's Overture to "The Flying Dutchman", Brahms Fourth Symphony in E minor, Three Movements from Verdi's String Quartet in E minor, Debussy's Two Nocturnes, [illegible] and [illegible] and strauss' Tone Poem, Death and Transfiguration.

[illegible] evening Beatrice Harrison, cellist, and Henri Deering, pianist, will give a joint recital in Jordan Hall.

The program includes the Arnold Bax's dance for cello and piano, which has not previously been performed in America and three chorales for cello and piano by Bach: "Ach was ist doch unser Leben," "Vater unser im Himmelreich," and "Christus der uns selig macht."

Cello solos by Miss Harrison will include "Bois Epais" by Lully; Allemande by Senaille-Salmon; and Adagio and Scherzo by Elgar.

Mr. Deering will play Debussy's "Reflets dans l'eau"; Ravel's "Rigoudon," and de Falla's "Andaluza."

Gladys de Almeida, soprano, will give a recital in Jordan Hall on Thursday evening.

In addition to songs by three Boston composers, Margaret Starr McLain, Edward Ballantine and Heinrich Gebhard—Miss Almeida will sing selections from Mozart, Haydn, Verdi, Brahms, Rubinstein.

The weekend brings the 19th pair of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Dr. Serge Koussevitzky in Symphony Hall on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

An additional concert will be given in Sanders Theater, Cambridge, when Dr. Koussevitzky will present Haydn's Symphony in E flat, No. 99, Faure's Elegie for Cello and Orchestra in which Jean Bedetti will appear as soloist, Ravel's Rapsodie Espagnole and three Wagnerian excerpts: Prelude to Lohengrin, Prelude and Love Death from Tristan und Isolde and Prelude to Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg.

At the Friday and Saturday concerts Nathan Milstein, the Russian violinist will appear as soloist with the Orchestra in Mendelssohn's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra.

Dr. Koussevitzky also announces for this program the First Symphony of Beethoven in C major and the First Symphony of Sibelius in E minor.

Old Timers Plan To Honor Larkin

LEWIS HANEY ON MARKET

Higher Stocks
PRICES PREDICTED
Before Summer

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, March 16—During the week ended March 14, the stock market was highly irregular, and lost some ground. The composite averages, which include rails and utilities as well as industrial stocks, closed the week from 1⅓ to 2 points lower than March.

It was by no means a one-way market, however, and among the most active stocks there were as many which gained as there were which lost. For example, six of the most active stocks—mostly oil, aviation, rubber and utility issues—gained from ⅜ of a point up to over 5 points during the week. Six other very active stocks lost similar amounts, these being mostly automobile and steel issues.

When nervousness concerning the European situation was somewhat relieved on Saturday, the market rebounded so as to recover more than the ground lost on Friday. In fact, most stocks closed just about where they did a week ago Monday.

As I interpret this reaction, it has been due only in part to the war scare. To be sure the threat of war in Europe was a factor, much as was the case last September and October. It seems fairly clear that a little selling came from abroad, while on this side operations for the rise were checked and some nervous selling was induced.

But as early as February 19 it was apparent that there was some "nervousness" over here. For one thing there has been a belated recognition of the reaction in business which went on in January and February. For another thing, the better students among the large operators sensed an overbought condition—not an acute one, but sufficient to suggest "stepping aside" for a while.

Finally, there have been a number of rather ill-advised moves in the market which needed correction. One was based on the notion that the President's tax proposal would lead to an early distribution of the large surpluses held by some corporations. Nothing of the sort is likely, and the mark-ups which followed the announcement of the tax scheme were not soundly based.

Another was the exaggeration of the notion that railway stocks have been much too low. This was helped along by the cold snap which caused a run-up in coal-car loadings. Then, too, there remained some liquidation of the notion that the TVA decision would be favorable to the utilities.

In view of all these conditions, the wonder is that the European war scare did not touch off a much more severe reaction than has occurred.

As it is, the composite averages have not broken decisively their February lows. The average of industrial stocks has not got down to its February low. "Lower resistence levels" are plainly indicated in a number of leading stocks, such as U. S. Steel at 60, Atchison at just over 73, and DuPont at a little above 141. General Motors still shows a series of lows on reactions which are successively higher.

My day-to-day average of the moves in the 20 most active stocks shows a rise. That is, if one had each day bought and sold stocks which were to be most active, one might have made about a point, despite all the reactions last week.

Another fact that became evident as the week passed, was that "asked prices" were holding up relatively well. The market was down because buyers were fewer and bids lower, rather than because sellers were dumping their holdings overboard.

In my opinion, Hitler has made his move not with the idea of war, but with the idea that conditions are such that he could do it with little danger of war. My guess is that his scheme will, in this respect, be justified.

While many of "the public" have had a scare, and some have been singed a bit, they are still fluttering around the market candle as eagerly as ever. Mr. Roosevelt is not going to do much hounding of business between now and election time. Nor is the budget going to be balanced.

FINAL
Liquidation of SLUMP
TWO TRENDS DEVELOPING

By Leslie Gould
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, March 16 — This year will be noted financially for two developments:

1. Clearing up of back dividends on preferred stocks, and
—2. Converting higher interest and dividend rate corporate securities into lower interest and dividend paying ones.

These are the natural developments in the final liquidation of an emergence from a great depression, such as the one of the last four to five years.

This department has just completed a compilation of 470 preferred stocks that have divided accumulations to be liquidated, either through payment out of earnings, or refinancing, such as the recent Bethlehem Steel plan. That important factor in the steel industry paid off the dividend accumulations with a new issue of lower rate preferred stock.

The accumulations range from 7½ cents on a little $10 par 6 per cent preferred to $104 per share on a $7 preferred of a leather company.

The great bulk of the accumulations are under $20 a share. Of the 470 preferreds compiled, 80 per cent are in that group.

Here's the way the accumulations stack; according to per share arrearages:

Per share Grouping	No. of issues With Arrears
Under $5 a share	109
From $5 to $10 a share	104
From $10 to $15 a share	76
From $15 to $20 a share	90
From $20 to $25 a share	48
From $25 to $30 a share	16
From $30 to $40 a share	13
From $40 to $50 a share	3
From $50 to $60 a share	4
From $60 to $70 a share	4
From $70 to $80 a share	None
From $80 to $90 a share	2
From $90 to $100 a share	None
Over $100 a share	1
Total	470

BILLS
TO WIDEN U. S. TRADE RULE

By Gene Robb

Washington, March 16—Held in leash since the first of the year a fresh troupe of plans to increase Government competition with private business and to extend Federal powers over industry are being paraded through Congress, presaging a drive for their enactment into law.

While signs of insurgency are evident toward the President's recommendations for a corporation surplus tax and new processing taxes, these two types of "invisible" imposts continue to hold the support of most congressional leaders.

Of a dozen pending measures to put bans on quantity discounts and service allowances through which large retailers have passed their savings of nearly 6 per cent to the consuming public, the Robinson and Utterback bills hold the spotlight.

Majority Leader Robinson says his bill, aleready on the Senate calendar, will be called up for a vote and probable passage within the next two weeks.

The Utterback bill on the House side will be discussed by the judiciary committee this week. Manufacturers and large retailers consider it even more drastic than the Robinson bill in its effect of freezing and tending to raise consumer prices. Its supporters claim the House will pass it.

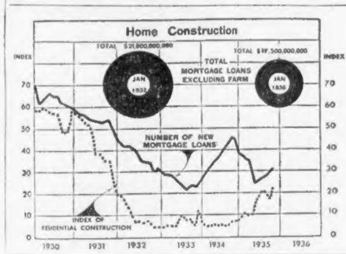
With public hearings ended, the Wheeler-Utterback bill to reform distribution practices in the lumber, steel, cement and sugar industries by abolishing the basing point system, is likely to come before the Senate as a rider to the Robinson bill.

Other amendments will be offered by critics of these measures.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee is recommending enactment of Chairman Wheeler's bill which gives the Federal Trade Commission the same unlimited authority claimed by the lobby investigators to snoop into the private files of any person or business.

The Trade Commission's authority would be broadened still further by an additional power to prohibit businesss practices it considered unfair or deceptive.

NEW MORTGAGES
DECLINE
Residential Building Also Off



This chart is of significant importance not only to the construction industry but to mortgagors and mortgagees as well.

Residential building had been declining at a more or less even rate since 1926, and new mortgages had closely followed this decline. Beginning in 1931 desidential building declined precipitously, while new mortgages continued a decline at a more leisurely pace.

The decline of the mortgage market was not due to stagnation in building as much as it was to lack of money in mortgage circles reflecting fear and uncertainty of the future.

As soon as the trend of recovery became definite this money came out of hiding and new mortgages picked up.

The black circles on the chart represent the non-farm home mortgage indebtedness as reported by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. This mortgage debt stood at 21.8 billions in Jan., 1932, and has been reduced to 17.5 billions as of Jan., 1936.

There are a number of factors instrumental in this reduction. Large scale foreclosures by private lenders during 1932 and 1933 wiped out nearly 1.5 billions and the loss of property to 500,000 owners.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, March 16—Analysis of freight traffic leaves no question but that business volume this far this year is far ahead of last year.

Loadings to date (first ten weeks of 1936) show an aggregate volume of 6,123,157 cars, a gain of 439,368 cars over the like 1935 period and an increase of 405,764 cars over the like 1934 period.

At this time a year ago, cumulative freight loadings were 33,604 cars under the preceding year. The big "unknown" in the general business picture is: How long will the present pace of activity continue? Some observers on the "bull" side predict that, if building activity steps up when the frost thaws out of the ground, the current brisk pace of trade generally will be sustained well into the summer.

Short Interest In Market Grows

Although the severity of the market break since the European political situation became menacing has forced liquidation of much long stock, it is understood the professional short interest has expanded sharply on the decline. Guesses in the Street yesterday estimated the bear account was the largest in many months and was said to include a large portion usually described as "selling against the box." Because of knowledge that investment trusts have been the principal buyers of numerous issues this year, the Street regarded these organizations as in the best position to make temporary short commitments against their portfolio holdings. However, there was no concrete evidence to support suggestions that the investing institutions were active on the short side.

Preferred Stock Dividend Rumors

The general market upset has failed to subdue rumors to the effect that a number of corporations plan shortly to resume regular dividends or retire big arrears on their preferred stocks. The latest mentioned in these reports are Shell Union Oil and National Supply. It is believed Shell Union directors will consider restoring the preferred to a regular dividend basis at their next meeting in May. No dividends have been paid on the issue since July, 1931, and arrears amount to $24.75 a share. The company recently marketed an issue of $60,000,000 debentures. The story on National Supply is that resumption of preferred dividends will be discussed by directors at the next meeting of the board. The accumulations amount to $29.75 a share.

Profit Taking Hits Curb Market

New York, March 16 (AP)—The Curb market encountered profit-taking after getting off to a fairly good start today and by the turn of the first hour had developed an irregular trend. Trading quieted.

Shares losing small fractions to around a point included Gulf Oil, Alabama Great Southern, Niagara Hudson, Pennroad and Singer Manufacturing.

Wall St. Hears

New York, March 16 (INS)—That first quarter shipments of the principal office equipment firms will be 15 to 20 per cent above a year ago.

That Julius Kayser & Co. (JKS) profits in the fiscal year ending June 30 should approximate $1.75 a share.

Steel Output Best In 21 Months

Stronger prices on light finished steel products and increased steel consumption combined last week to lift steel works' operations two points to 57½ per cent, breaking through last year's high of 57 per cent in December, says Steel. The steel rate is the peak since the third week of June, 1934, at 59 per cent, when an impending price advance also stimulated shipments.

Structural shape awards snapped back to 28,232 tons from 8738 tons in the preceding week, including 3000 tons of shapes and plates for a gas holder—largest of its type—for the Ford Motor Co. at Detroit.

Pig iron shipments are increasing as an advance of $1 a ton, the first announced since last November, finally will become generally applicable April 1. Scrap maintains a strong tone, but prices are leveling off. Steel's scrap composite, after rising nine consecutive weeks, last week declined four cents to $14.46.

Due to the recent reduction in pipe prices, the finished steel composite has dropped $1.10 to $52. This is the lowest since April, 1934, at $51.10.

The iron and steel composite also has been affected by the pipe reduction and adjustments in semi-finished steel, being 56 cents lower at $33.04.

Washington Notebook

Washington, March 16 (AP)—Wholesale automobile financing by 456 organizations reporting to the census bureau increased in January to $123,195,888 covering 242,324 cars compared with $96,059,710 on 159,094 cars in January, 1935. The December total was $154,382,330 on 260,764 cars.

Commerce reports from leading industrial centers say demand for electric equipment and household appliances has broadened considerably, with the total running well ahead of a year ago.

Japan has regained its position as the leading foreign market for American cotton. Commerce figures placed Japanese takings from August through February at 1,115,000 bales, compared with about 1,000,000 shipped to England, which held the lead earlier in the season. Exports to Japan were slightly behind the previous season, while the movement to the United Kingdom was nearly twice as heavy.

Germany raised its output of crude oil last year to 430,000 tons, an increase of 36 per cent over the preceding year, under stimulus of government efforts to develop home production by paying 50 per cent of the cost of drilling in unproven territory, commerce reports says.

MARKET
Fights Trade TREND
LINK SELLING TO HITLER

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal S

New York, March 16—Though having recently reversed its trend, the stock market continues to march in the opposite direction from business.

After business in March turned definitely upward, the stock market turned down.

This perverse behavior is not set down to imply that the mind behind the ticker is moronic. Perhaps, the market, in ignoring the minor recession in business during the winter, which was aggravated by exceptionally frigid weather, was reflecting accurately longer term probabilities.

Obviously the recent selling marketwise prior to the sharp rally on Saturday has not been related to the immediate business news, which has been more constructive than otherwise.

After a year of vigorously rising stock prices, there is no particular need of any external event to explain a moderate sell-off. As a matter of fact, it is obvious that the capital gains tax has acted as a deterrent to normal profit taking.

Recent selling has naturally been linked in the popular mind with the historic events unfolding in Europe, where Hitler of Germany treated the Locarno Treaty as a "scrap of paper." Apparently thus far European liquidation of American stocks has been light, but there was some selling by sensitive floor traders and other domestic speculators who wanted to be out of the market before aliens unloaded.

Unless forced to sell for purposes of war financing, Europeans are unlikely to liquidate until they feel that the cream is off the recovery movement in the United States.

Nevertheless, the fact should be recorded that, in spite of the widespread talk of nationalism and economic self containment, our financial markets are far from insulated from outside world events.

The tremendous investments of Europeans in our stock market in the last two years has made the New York market highly sensitive to foreign developments which prove important enough to cause heavy foreign selling. Aliens never before owned so many American securities.

As a matter of fact, foreign holdings of American securities and property are doubtless almost large enough to offset the total unliquidated war debt to the United States Treasury, and could be used as a method of payment of the debt, provided the will to pay existed on the other side and the will to collect prevailed on this side.

As domestic business enters the spring period, the basic trend again appears to be definitely upward.

If present prospects are confirmed the winter recession will prove to have been nothing more than a lull in the recovery movement.

The most hopeful tendency in the domestic economic situation is the increasing evidence of a belated expansion in the heavy industries. Milder weather will be conducive to an important broadening of activities in the construction industry.

* * *

Though the party in power will doubtless seek to take credit for any recovery which has occurred during its administration, the recovery movement has been more backward than normal. The current agitation for new punitive taxation is typical of the deterrent to business progress which comes from political change.

* * *

One of the paradoxes of modern life is that efforts of tender hearted reformers to improve the social status of workers frequently result instead in booming labor saving automatic machinery. This tendency is currently reported in both the textile and coal industries.

CALUMET & HECLA

Reports PROFIT FOR 1935

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Boston financial circles, always attentive when coppers are mentioned, is finding the statement of Calumet & Hecla for 1935 particularly interesting.

The big Michigan mine, whose general offices are in this city, had an operating profit last year and also reports interesting gold developments on its property.

Before depreciation and depletion allowances Calumet showed a net of $1,691,583 for the period. This compares with a comparable loss of $65,503 in 1934. Balance sheet position as reported is strong, with current assets standing at $8,485,243—$2,012,987 in cash and $1,601,843 in Treasury securities at cost—while current liabilities totaled but $560,234 and consisted solely of accounts payable.

The real interest in the Calumet statement, however, attaches to the remarks on gold prospects. In the Ishpeming area most encouraging results have been obtained in the old Ropes mine. Geological conditions encountered so far have been good and sampling indicates the possibility of considerable tonnages of low-grade material. At the same time the company, after preliminary geological work, has taken options on the greater part of the formerly famous Goldfield, Nevada, area. The company states that there are sound geological reasons for believing that there are localities in the area, heretofore unexplored, favorable to the occurence of other gold deposits.

Here and There: The Brookmire Counselor out today suggests that clients further reduce their stock holdings . . . Invested positions of 50 per cent are advised . . . Thus establishing a cash position of the same proportions . . . A survey by the United Business Service finds that the south and west will benefit most by the bonus distribution . . . Mississippi is top state . . . Accounting for only 0.6 per cent of total U. S. sales the state's veterans will receive nearly one per cent of the total bonus distribution.

The investment policy of this column resulted in trimming down a hypothetical trading position by 50 per cent in the past two weeks. Consequently sufficient protection has been achieved to warrant a stand-by attitude while determining whether or not the market is as strong as it pretended to be on Saturday. The test of this will come on a secondary reaction, not on a further rally. If the tendency of volume to expand during reactionary periods is still in evidence, a close approximation of Friday's lows, if not a breaking of them, is to be expected. The alternative is contraction of volume and less hectic price movements. In this event a few points dip will suffice and new buying must be strongly considered.

Short Squibs: Before the market opened we were quizzed on our Saturday comments on utilities . . . To clarify our idea we will say that if the market takes the less favorable course, outlined above, the power and light shares can be hardly expected to buck the trend . . . Consequently too bulky holdings in the group would not be warranted, much as we like it . . . The American Institute of Finance letter today contains some interesting thoughts on rail action . . . Directed at the lack of unity which prevailed all through the earlier weeks of 1936 . . . And concluding that the rails having failed to assist the industrials in their latest thrust into new high ground may be giving a stopping signal as they have so often in the past.

N. Y. CENTRAL'S Gross Up 12 P. C.

February gross revenue of New York Central will be about 12 per cent ahead of February, 1935, according to F. E. Williamson, president.

He said the Central had incurred expenses of between $1,000,000 and $1,250,000 during the winter months for snow removal and other cold weather expense.

Asked whether there were any developments on the passenger fare matter, Mr. Williamson stated: "Not yet." He declined to comment further.

UTILITY SHARES ARE FIRM

New York, March 16 — Buying of low-priced utilities and a few air transport company issues helped to stiffen the stock market today after the list had been dented in early dealings by profit taking.

Transcontinental & Western got up 2 points, near the start of the fourth hour, and others up fractions to a point or more included United Air Lines, National Power & Light, American Power & Light, American & Foreign Power, Borden, Baldwin Locomotive and Chrysler.

At the same time losers of a point or so included Bethlehem, Johns-Manville, duPont, Allied Chemical, Amerada, Westinghouse, Pullman, Colorado Fuel & Iron, Santa Fe and Douglas. Trading was comparatively dull on both the rallies and declines. Such issues as N. Y. Central, U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Motors and Consolidated Gas were about unchanged.

The dollar improved moderately against leading foreign exchanges. Bonds were fairly steady. Commodities were a trifle irregular.

Timely Items

The European situation still held much of the attention of brokerage circles, although the consensus was that conversational and not actual war could be expected. But most market commentators were forecasting irregular trends until the Rhineland dispute is ironed out one way or the other.

Backwardness of the rails was far from comforting to those analysts who were looking for the transportation group to confirm the recent upturn of the industrials.

While the financial district, as a whole, was optimistic for the spring business outlook, it was understood that price shading has cropped out in several lines and, with higher costs of operating facing various industries, it was thought in some quarters that profit margins in some cases may be smaller this year.

The magazine "Steel" stated that "steel demand seemed to have more substance, independent of price considerations." Mills were being aided by increasing automobile production, it was said, although new purchases by railroads appeared to be subsiding.

It was pointed out that scrap was maintaining a generally strong tone, although prices seemed to be leveling off somewhat. Increased pig iron shipments were seen, as an advance of $1 a ton in the metal, first announced last November, will become applicable April 1.

Steel's Scrap Composite after rising nine consecutive weeks, last week declined four cents to $14.46.

Registrations of new passenger automobiles in February, it was estimated by R. L. Polk & Company, dropped to 160,000 units from 215,782 in January and 170,615 in the second month last year.

The French franc was off .00⅞ of a cent at the beginning of foreign transactions, and sterling was ⅜ of a cent easier at $4.97½.

Bond Prices Mostly Higher

New York, March 16 (INS)—Despite continued easiness in the U. S. government list the bond market worked irregularly higher today in moderately active trading.

Several fair-sized gains were chalked up in the industrial and rail sections. American Ice, 5s, Pure Oil 4½s and Studebaker 6s each gained a point or more, while Warner Brothers 6s did nearly as well.

At the same time Republic Steel 4½s and American Rolling Mill 4¼s dropped fractionally under their previous closings.

RESERVE HEADS Meet With Board

Eleven presidents of Federal Reserve banks assembled to meet the board of governors of the system. It was the first meeting of the presidents since reorganization of the system March 1.

Formation of open market committee of the system from among the various presidents and a meeting of that committee with the board may grow out of the current conference.

Primary purpose of the meeting is to "get acquainted" following reorganization of the system. The one president absent is the one from the San Francisco bank. A successor to J. U. Calkin of that city has not been chosen.

Reduction

Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Company proposes to change the par value of its capital stock from $25 to $5 per share, each present share to be exchanged for one new share.

Caution RULES AMONG Traders

By B. C. FORBES

American security markets are being influenced altogether unduly by day-to-day war talk in Europe.

Fluctuations on the New York Stock Exchange last week were extremely violent—falling sharply on Monday, recovering on Tuesday and Wednesday, lurching badly on Thursday and Friday, rebounding spectacularly on Saturday.

These gyrations were not caused by home events, but by rapidly-shifting peace and war reports from Europe.

Domestic developments, on balance, were fairly reassuring.

Admittedly, Europeans have been unusually active lately in our securities. They became bullish quite early in our long-sustained upward movement. Latterly their sales have outweighed their purchases. But, there has been no indiscriminate dumping.

Should hostilities burst forth on the European continent, America probably would be called upon to absorb immediately considerable liquidation.

But, after the first shock, Europe would not be a dominant influence here. As a matter of fact, not a few foreign investors would be likely to favor high-grade American securities, on the theory that they would be safer, less vulnerable than their own.

American Agricultural and other staple commodities would also stand to be helped rather than hurt by war in Europe. Thus far, commodity prices have not been as volatile as security quotations. Last week's net changes were unimportant.

Notwithstanding all the serious objections raised against President Roosevelt's ill-considered scheme to turn corporation taxes topsy-turvy, no trustworthy assurances have been forthcoming that the plan will be abandoned. Latest intimations are that, despite childish Treasury protests, provision will be made for retaining some considerable percentage of earnings without subjecting them to prohibitive imposts.

Without such provision, the proposed law would be most deplorable, mischievous, disaster breeding. Even thus amended, the law would be of extremely questionable merit as a dependable revenue-producer and as an influence on future upbuilding and stability.

Palpably, those in authority at Washington have revealed infinitely greater ingenuity in spending public revenue than in devising sensible methods of raising revenue.

Trade and industrial news is uneven, but not wholly unsatisfactory.

Better weather has stimulated retail buying, and brisk spring business is confidently expected. Consumers are little impressed by the hesitancy which has ruled for some time in the highest circles.

Most industrial statistics have lately compared somewhat less favorably with the last year than was the case some time ago.

Disappointment greeted a drop last week in car-loadings and in electric power production. Volume of business passing through banks was not as far above 1935 as heretofore. On the other hand, steel output, thanks mainly to purchases by motor makers, gained more than seasonally.

Auto production is expanding. Latest employment figures are somewhat more encouraging, but are still far from ideal; the national breadline continues unconscionably lengthy, with the consequence that relief requirements are staggering, and attempts to transfer the burden to local communities are bringing trouble.

Easily the most inspiring trend is the unmistakable increase in building. Governmental lending on easy terms isn't wholly responsible. Private construction, especially of homes, is reviving and promises to broaden greatly, unless something unforeseen occurs to arrest this wholesome and most helpful movement. Pent-up building needs are enormous enough to keep the industry busy for several years.

* * *

Many among the employing classes, as well as an increasing number of heavyweight investors, are disposed to act cautiously for the present.

Cash Shows Gain

Current assets of Simmons Company as of December 31, 1935, including $4,494,850 cash, amounted to $14,001,237 and current liabilities were $2,617,086.

This compares with cash of $3,098,711, current assets of $11,667,764 and current liabilities of $2,195,154 on December 31, 1934.

Loaning Rates

There was little demand for stocks in the loan crowd. United Fruit, Follansbee Bros. and Colorado Fuel & Iron were quoted at a premium of $1 per 100 shares and American Sugar common was quoted at a premium of $2 per 100 shares.

Rent That Vacant Apartment, or Room!

Here Spring Is La Mode

Dresses for misses, for juniors and women, evening dresses, too, attracted thousands of feminine shoppers over the week-end to the new dress department at I. J. Fox on Washington street. Spacious, replete with modernity, the new department provides colorful background for the dashing fashions of the season.

The fourth floor has been arranged into four separate shops, the Misses Dress Shop, Junior Dress Shop, Women's Dress Shop and Evening Dress Shop.

Of this new I. J. Fox achievement, David Lilienthal, vice-president, today said:

"It is our purpose to have our dress departments virtually sparkle with new fashions every day. The response to these new departments by the public has been most gratifying, indicating that the women of New England welcome the fundamental purpose of these dress shops—that of presenting the most brilliant fashions and the most outstanding values."

GENERAL CONDITIONS

Unsettled weather prevails in the eastern half of the country and light rains have fallen from the lower Mississippi Valley northeastward over Tennessee, the Ohio Valley, New York, and western and northern New England. Pressure is slightly below normal from Ontario and Quebec southwestward through the Appalachian mountain region and the Middle Gulf States, with lowest reading 29.80 inches at Vicksburg. An area of pressure above 30.30 inches extends from Idaho eastward to South Dakota, and fair weather prevails in the western half of the country. Temperatures are 6 degrees to 14 degrees higher in the modified tropical marine air over the Middle Atlantic and New England States. There has not been much change in temperature in the polar continental air which extends from the interior of Canada southward over the Lake region and Central Plains to Northern Texas, and also not much change in temperature in the tropical marine air over the Gulf and southeastern states, except intermittent cooling due to thundershowers.

"Frankie," Bogus Bill King, Sought

Police and federal agents today were seeking a mysterious "Frankie" alleged to be responsible for a flood of spurious ten dollar bills throughout New England. He was named by two South End night club waiters, Herman Donati, 27, of Jacques street, Somerville, and Leonard Lippi, 22, of Quincy street, Roxbury, arrested by secret service agents and special officers.

The officers claim that the two men admitted buying ten counterfeit bills for $30 and that several of them were passed.

Little America Talk for Veterans

Milton Post, 114, American Legion, invites all World War veterans to attend its regular monthly meeting tonight at post headquarters, Walnut street, at 9 o'clock. Amory Waite, Jr., of Wollaston, Chief Radio Operator aboard the Bear of Oakland, with the Byrd expedition, will give an illustrated talk on life at Little America.

Can You See Through Your Windshield?

Judging from the automobile accidents last year, there were plenty of drivers who couldn't. As a matter of record there were 25 derailments caused by collisions of trains and autos in which 18 people were killed and a score injured. This was only one kind of the dozens of auto accidents. Wisdom would seem to dictate safety. Your eyes are your greatest safety device.

Quick Action Needed On Defense Bills

AMERICAN defense took a long step forward when, on March 10, the House Military Affairs Committee UNANIMOUSLY recommended that our air force be made FIVE TIMES ITS PRESENT ACTUAL FIGHTING STRENGTH.

THIS IS GETTING SOMEWHERE AT LAST!

It is almost ghastly to contemplate the fact that with all the world armed from toe to eye, our air defense numbers ONLY 776 actual fighting planes.

The quick action on the McSwain Bill, which will give us a defensive air force of FOUR THOUSAND PLANES, should also speed up the passage of the Army Appropriation Bill, which the House has already passed and which is now before the Senate, and the Naval Appropriation Bill.

EVENTS in Europe and Asia can no longer be blinked at by even the most optimistic.

For those in charge of our defenses to listen to pacifists or professional it-can't-happen prophets is inviting NATIONAL SUICIDE.

Representative Hill, ranking member of the House Military Affairs Committee, said with considerable sagacity:

"Airplanes are wonderful as a striking force to guard us from foreign attack, but we need FAR MORE PREPARATIONS for national defense if we are to avoid being drawn into international conflicts."

However, four thousand planes is a splendid beginning.

But we must go still further in our DEFENSE PREPARATIONS, as Mr. Hill suggests.

Our Army should be built up to the full strength authorized by the National Defense Act and should ALWAYS BE PREPARED FOR INSTANT MOBILIZATION.

AND WHILE we are keeping an eye on tinder-sparks from abroad, let us not neglect to keep a sharp eye on the ENEMIES IN OUR MIDST, who would, when the occasion offers, ATTEMPT TO SELL US OUT TO AT LEAST THREE FOREIGN COUNTRIES, ALL ARMED FOR ACTION.

The First Brain Trust

It Was a "Flop," Too

Clay tablets hammered out in the far-off valley of the Tigres and the Euphrates 2500 years ago clearly show that even in those days price fixing, wage fixing and other governmental tampering were failures.

These disclosures by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago ought to set at rest all thought of terming the Roosevelt Administration's policies as NEW.

The Raw Deal evidently is old stuff.

The Babylonians had their brain-trusters and they were "flops," too.

From Hammurabi on, the Kings of Babylon now and then tried to call in scholars with no practical experience in government to tell them how to restore prosperity.

The scholars did their best—and it was awful.

When they were thrown out, the ancient records show, and when government restrictions on merchants were removed, prosperity returned naturally as a result of the laws of supply and demand and the unfettered endeavors of the people.

You see pictured above a carving of an early brain-truster from Babylon, with his accompanying bull. This brain-truster has a package of seeds in one hand, and is perhaps discussing soil erosion or crop control. You wonder whether the Babylonians also had an AAA or a Rural Rehabilitation Authority. For their sake, let us hope not.

It might pay the Raw Dealers to study history.

They could start now—or, if too busy, begin next November. They are likely to have plenty of time on their hands THEN.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 16—Diary: With my lady to Maillard's for a dainty bite. And for a swing up the avenue passing John Charles Thomas and Jack Wheeler. And Lois Long back from the Florida keys gadding about the boutiques. And Goadby Loew in a Spring ensemble tout of slate gray with salmon pink tie.

O. O. McIntyre

So home and Billy Seaman breezed by a moment and a note from George and Colette Armsby, who have fallen in love with Arizona. Later, to a tea to young Douglas Fairbanks, then driving to Brooklyn Heights, Prospect Park bursting with bloom and we circled a lake afoot.

To dinner at Larue's with Jessie and Will Hays and argle-bargled with Mary Lewis and Bob Hague nearby. And there was a fly oldster of 80, the best dancer on the floor. To bed reading Charles Morrow Wilson's excellent "Rabbit Rouser," as fine and true a tale of up-the-holler life as ever I read.

New York's current Tammany chieftain is a type reversing all the physical formulas. Most of the bosses have been the cartoonists' delight—embonpoint, droopy jowls, whiskers, etc. James Dooling has none of these. He is slim, dapper and habited in the flashy fashion of the successful prize fight promoter.

He smokes cigarettes chain fashion and looks at questioners through innocent-looking Irish blue eyes—saying very little. And when he speaks it's in the clipped East Side tang of Al Smith. He is a man's man, unmarried, has an army of friends but few intimates. And is a sucker for detective yarns.

Orchestra leaders are reputedly least jealous of their contemporaries of professional folk. So far as is known there is not a feud among them—Whiteman and Vallee frequently dine together. So do Guy Lombardo and Wayne King. George Olsen and Vincent Lopez golf together and Ray Noble and Jack Denny are often companions in off hours.

The good will attitude is the more commendable because the baton wavers are presumably plumed with the affiatus called temperament. And they are in a calling that has become fiercely competitive.

Overheard in West 47th street: "He's slicker than two eels wrestling in a tub of hot lard."

The Players, where shy Oliver Herford, like a gray wrath, flitted in and out murmuring his sudden wisdoms and memorable shafts of dry wit, are planning to honor him as no other member has ever been honored save the founder who bequeathed his home to the membership.

One room for him is called The Edwin Booth Memorial and is, I hear, exactly as he left it, his meerschaum on the table and an opened book and several articles of wearing apparel hanging in the wardrobe.

The Oliver Herford Memorial will be a similar room hung with Herford's paintings and drawings of cats.

The man who came closest to filling the kindly niche left by Oliver Herford is Don Marquis, now convalescing from an attack that laid him low. Marquis, born in Walnut, Ill., and reared in the South, plump and white haired had attained a mellowy philosophical outlook after many busy years reporting, columning and authoring.

In younger days he had moments of bitterness in his writings but Time softened. He had an inexhaustible fund of stories scattered with keen aphorisms that always made him the center of a crowd.

Few newspapermen ever attained the beloved sort of popularity that is deservedly his. He is in his 50's and his wife is an accomplished actress.

Bagatelles: Heywood Broun is joining the journalistic hegira to Russia . . . Frederic Lonsdale, London playwright, breakfasts on clabber after a night out and feels swell . . . Two orchestra leaders have Social Register wives—Al Donahue and Eddy Duchin . . . If Bob Reinkerhoff takes a single sip of wine he turns as red as a beet . . . Rupert Hughes is a runner-up for Damon Runyon in night coffee drinking . . . Margaret Anglin is the most studious American actress . . . Ruth Weston's Sealyham sits in the wings and watches her act . . . Bob Davis is off to Japan.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Got a snappy, streamlined, 16-cylinder, new cuss word you aren't using? Then send it along. C. O. D., and I'm yours-for-whatever. For I cer-tainly can use it. And all because of what?

Elsie Robinson

All because I've made a fool of myself. Wasted a perfectly good day. A regular honey of a day that started out full of snap and sparkle . . . flags flying, sirens blowing . . . all signs favorable for creating a whole crate of classics.

So what? That's what I'm telling you. I wasted that gorgeous day . . . did exactly nothing with it . . . tossed it away as if it had been a wad of last week's gum. Just for what? Just for STATIC.

A NEW WORLD

STATIC . . . if you'll analyze all life failures, you'll find that in most cases STATIC lay at the root of things. The miserable morals didn't MEAN to waste their lives . . . didn't PLAN to make a mess of everything. But somehow STATIC got the best of them.

First place, they didn't face the fact that this modern life is a mightily crammed and complicated affair, which can't possibly be lived as Dad and Mother lived their lives.

Generally speaking, Dad and Mother had just about as much work, play and incidental business as they needed to fill their 24 hours comfortably.

They didn't have to worry much about planning their performance. They could drift along, taking things as they came—OR LETTING THINGS TAKE THEM.

But you, nowadays, have a hundred interests to their one — a hundred demands upon your time, energy, sympathy and wits. From shower bath to shut-off, this Machine Age rattles, roars, rings and raves for attention.

TELEPHONES SHRIEK . . . EXTRAS SCREECH . . . TAXIS THUNDER ON YOU IN BELLOWING BRIGADES.

Mabel wants you to come to Susie's shower. Jim wants you to go to the old gang rally. You ought to write a letter to the folks . . . you feel like a fool because you haven't read that new book . . . and for heaven's sake, when are you going to find time for a facial and finger wave!

Yes, life in 1936 is certainly some pressing performance.

And if you want to get anywhere with yourself, you have to pick and protect your program with all you've got.

Meaning just what?

Meaning that for even the smartest and strongest among us, it is only possible to do ten per cent of the things we'd like to do—feel we ought to do.

Life has become a matter of merciless elimination . . . cutting out every act but the vitally essential if you want to get anything done at all.

A BUDGET NEEDED

And this doesn't apply simply to the budgeting of your hours . . . it's even more necessary to budget your emotions. Focus and conserve your energy. Ride hard on your own curiosity, irritability, laziness, haziness, sentimentality. And likewise the Other Fellow's! Or else? Or else you'll scatter like the well-known Autumn leaves, stranger. Find yourself going in 8368 different directions at once . . . and not getting anywhere with any of them.

That's what's the matter with STATIC, and that's what happened to my day. Same thing as happened to your day—and yours—and yours.

I was rarin' to go.

And if I had had the sense and self-control to bend all my energies toward doing the definite job which it was possible for me to do—and had firmly refused to let any other interests crash in on my station—I could have accomplished something with that day. But, instead—there I was, trying to act like all the Mary Brothers at once.

Will I, maybe, some day grow up and be my age?

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

The famous Dr. Steinach is said to have discovered a new method of making youngsters out of oldsters. And this time it's a "complete rejuvenation."

Shades of Faust and Ponce de Leon! What does he mean "complete?"

Suppose he CAN give you back your youthful looks and your beautiful vigor. Can he give you back your young enthusiasm? And your beautiful young digestion?

Can he give you back your youthful courage, your faith in human nature and your belief in your own high destiny?

Why do we Americans CLUTCH so desperately at every imitation of youth, instead of welcoming the mellow years as the Orientals do? Why do we lie about our age, instead of bragging about it?

The wisest man of his generation was the late Rudyard Kipling, who quietly retired from the world and the limelight when the sun of his great popularity seemed to be setting. He lived comfortably and happily and died without losing his dignity by "hanging on" and trying to be "peppy."

It is not foolish to try to LOOK young. Every woman should look as young as beauty creams and beauty parlors can make her look. Every man should look as young as he can, as long as he can.

Its fooling yourself and pretending to BE younger than you are, which makes you do silly things and puts a strain on the dear old heart, that carries you off before your time. I should hate to meet one of these rejuvenated ladies or gentlemen with old minds and hearts in side of young bodies—like the heroine of "Black Oven."

Lots of people have exercised themselves right into their graves, trying to "keep young." Lots more have worried themselves to death in the attempt to keep up to the youthful pace and beat the game.

Everybody has his day. His day of youth. His day of love. And, if he's lucky, his day of success or fame or popularity.

EVERYBODY is young, once—and everybody is old, once, if he lives long enough.

The art of staying young consists in growing old CHEERFULLY and frankly. Youth is beautiful and wonderful, if it's real; but artificial youth, false youth, imitation youth is all just hooey!

Be your age—and LIKE it! Brag about it, as Fanny Ward does—don't lie about it!

Uncle Sam's Mail Bag

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

President Roosevelt gets 7000 letters a day. A Niagara of letters cascades daily into the various departments. Great fleets of trucks are speeding day and night, to distribute them. Armies of clerks and battalions of specialists are busy providing courteous answers and the information requested, where good faith and legitimate interest is disclosed.

The governmental tide of mail is out of all proportion to the increase in population, in literacy and the improvement in communications since Lincoln's day. The curve has gone sharply upward during the depression years.

Tons of these letters are anguished and bewildered appeals for aid; others, flowing in a steady diurnal stream, are impassioned briefs for some new Messianic theory, offered as the unfailing cure for all our ills; many thousands of them are from eccentrics, expounding fuzzy theories; a fair proportion is from simple, sensible men and women, commenting rationally on government or politics or requesting explicit information about something of importance to the writer.

AMAZING PATIENCE

The Department of Agriculture gets the heaviest bulk of departmental mail. Through its various services—radio talks, bulletins and information services—it has given multitudes in the rural regions a sense of intimate contact with their government. The diligence and patience of the department in running down information is amazing. A staff of trained specialists is busy answering questions which have to do with everyday human problems.

All in all, Uncle Sam's daily correspondence is undoubtedly the one definite point of contact which the waxing Colossus of government has with that residual democracy of the founding fathers.

There is a grand comedie humaine in this flow of letters from the forgotten man, if one can view it as do the patient, kindly scientists. Many of them are directed merely to "The Government, Washington." They reach the proper department and get thorough attention. Here's one from the wife of a foreign-born Iowa farmer, received by the Department of Agriculture:

"I make my hosban nice goose feather bed. We got only burlap sack, and feathers come out and tickle. Papa has a big mustash. He must get up at five to milk and I hear Papa making big noise. The mustash has in it many feathers and Papa cannot get them out. He is so mad the children all wake up and cry. It is very bad in our house. Please write to me how I get something better as burlap to put feathers in to make bed so better we can sleep and Papa won't have trouble."

The Department puts its mind on the problem. The farmer's wife got explicit information about some cheap, serviceable ticking obtainable in her neighborhood, with some new angles on how to process the feathers. In time, there came another letter:

"We are much happy with nice new feather bed and kindly obliged to government. My cousin send me two dollars so we can buy ticking as you said. Papa does not have more trouble with feathers and we sleep nice. He says I should say in his country where he was born government would not do so and this is a good government."

WHOLESALE ADVICE

The Bureau of Animal Husbandry carries on a tremendous correspondence. The bulk of this has to do with important details of the care, breeding and rearing of animals, the letters coming from farmers and stock raisers.

There is revealed, however, a widespread and alert public interest in the sub-human world, and many earnest inquiries have to do with animal behavior and psychology.

Many thousands of these letters are from children who want to know this or that about their dogs. One 12-year-old Indiana lad wrote in to ask, "Can dogs think?" The bureau did a thorough job on that one. A kindly old scientist simplified for the lad the best that has been written on the intelligence of dogs, gave him references and suggested a few simple experiments.

The bright lad wrote back to make further inquiries, and the government continued the correspondence. Here was a fine mind, tremendously stimulated by contact with the great reservoir of specialized intelligence at Washington.

TREMENDOUS COST

Of course, the pioneers, fighting bears and Indians, didn't write to the government about feathers in their mountain beds. The whole question of "governmental coddling" is wide open, and the taxation burden imposed by staffs of scientists engaged in feather bed and layer cake inquiries will make a good many Americans snort with indignation.

The depression has greatly increased the correspondence, and included in this is enough "crackpot" mail to catch the interest of our leading psychiatrists, if they ever glance that way.

The right of free access to the government and free petition is pretty deeply intrenched in our traditions. That feather bed exchange with a felicitous outcome for the moustachioed farmer, at any rate, shows a tiny residue of human betterment, which is perhaps more than some of the wider outreaches of the New Deal can show.

Anyway, all this informal letter-writing seems to put the government over on the Human Side of the News.

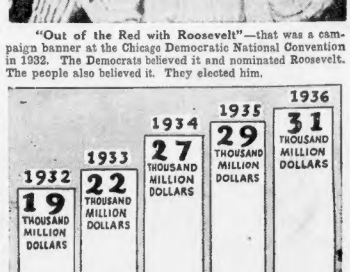
Let's Look at the Record

"Out of the Red with Roosevelt"—that was a campaign banner at the Chicago Democratic National Convention in 1932. The Democrats believed it and nominated Roosevelt. The people also believed it. They elected him.



"Thirty-one thousand millions dollars"—that IS the national debt after four years of Roosevelt. It's an increase of TWELVE THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS since 1932. What kind of banner will the Democrats make out of that?
